Dewey Turns Down Fish's Indorsement In Campaign

Statement Assails 'Injection of Racial Or Religious Issues' As 'Un-American'

Albany, N. Y., July 28 (AP).—Governor Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for President, publicly rejected the support of Representative Hamilton Fish (R., N. Y.), today in a statement terming injection of a racial or religious issue into a political campaign "a disgraceful, un-American act."

Dewey's statement, which brough prompt retorts from Fish and Republican leaders backing his drive for reelection in New York's 29th District, was released by James C. Haggerty, executive assistant to the Governor, who said it was prompted by an interview with Fish published yesterday in the New York Post.

In the interview, Haggerty said, Fish was quoted as asserting "the Jews are more or less for the New Deal, unfortunately" and that "I think it would be much better for them if they split their vote between the two major parties."

"Misinformed," Says Fish

"Two years ago I publicly opposed the nomination and election of Congressman Fish," Dewey's statement said. "The statements attributed to him confirm my judgment expressed at that time." The Governor added:

"I have always fought that kind of thing all my life and always will, regardless of partisan consideration. I have never accepted the support of any such individual and I never shall."

Fish, veteran of 24 years in Congress and seeking reelection in a district embracing Delaware, Rockland, Orange and Sullivan Counties, is opposed in the August 1 Republican primary by Augustus W. Bennett, Newburgh lawyer.

Informed in New York City of Dewey's statetment, Fish commented that "evidently Mr. Dewey misunderstood what I said and must have been badly misinformed."

Fish reiterated his support of the Dewey-Bricker ticket.

"When I referred to the fact that the people of Jewish origin are largely in favor of the New Deal I stated a fact that everybody knows," Fish said. "I made no attack whatsoever, and never have, on the Jewish people. I have never been anti-Semitic. What I stated was just the plain truth—that the Jewish voters are largely for the New Deal and President Roosevelt."

Predicts His Own Renomination

Fish predicted his own renomination, and asserted the Dewey statement would tend to increase his majority.

Comments of regret over Dewey's statement came from Mrs. George B. St. George of Tuxedo Park, Orange County Republican chairman. The party organizations in both counties are supporting Fish.

Asserting, "I deplore the Governor's action," Mrs. St. George, a Dewey supporter, said: "I think it will do him a great deal of harm in Orange County."

Nugent said the statement would "cost Mr. Dewey many votes in this district."

Wendell Willkie, who urged the defeat of Fish in 1942, declined comment on the Dewey statement. The 1940 GOP presidential nominee said two years ago that Fish's renomination at that time would give the opposition "the right to use Fish's record as a symbol of Republican political philosophy."

Nats Lose Again, This Time, 8 to 2

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox, sweeping the four-game series to make it eight victories in their last ten starts, used the long-range technique against Washington's Nats for an 8 to 2 triumph today.

Johnny Dickshot's triple off Wilfred Lefebvre with the bases loaded started the Chicago scoring in the third and Ralph Hodgin's homer two pitches later made it a 5-run inning. Hal Trosky hit his season's seventh homer off Reliever Alex Carrasquel in the fifth inning.

Southpaw Ed. Lopat scattered eight Washington hits for his fifth victory against six losses.

It was the seventh straight defeat and 11 losses in 12 games for the Nats.

Speedy Action Promised on Reconversion

Congress Leaders Tell Byrnes They'll Buckle Down to Job Next Week

By Mary Spargo

War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes announced last night that Democratic leaders had promised Congress would get right to work when it reconvenes Tuesday on the twin problems of providing for warworkers whose jobs are ended and converting industry to a peace-time basis.

Demands that Congress, instead of taking three-day recesses starting August 1, buckle down to reconversion and demobilization problems was sparked by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who called a special meeting of Republican Senators for Tuesday.

Democratic leaders were quick to seize the ball, although some scored Vandenberg's statement regarding the "chances of an early victory over Germany" being "encouraging."

Reynolds Summons Committee

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (D., N. C.), chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, in whose jurisdiction reconversion legislation was placed, said he had asked all members of his committee to be in Washington Tuesday, to consider bills.

Senator Warren R. Austin (R., Vt.), ranking minority member, has notified his office that he will be here for the meeting.

In response to a request from Byrnes, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, Speaker Sam Rayburn and House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack sent telegrams promising prompt consideration of reconversion, remobil-

July Output To Be Short By 500 Planes

Summer Production Slump, July 4th Holiday, Reasons

By Ben W. Gilbert

July's aircraft production is expected to fall at least 500 planes short of schedule, possibly dropping below the 8000 mark, informed sources revealed last night.

Acknowledging the existence of a summer production slump accounting for at least a part of the lag, officials explained, however, that some planes were lost to July's record because of the July 4 holiday, which was used by some manufacturers — with Government permission—to take inventory.

The count for the month also will be reduced somewhat as a result of a change in the method of counting some types of planes, which tallies them after they have been through modification centers, instead of as soon as they are flown away from assembly plants.

Present schedules call on the industry to average 8000 planes a month for the next few months, with increases in total weight called for as more heavy planes are produced. Present manpower must be retained to meet the schedules, it was said.

Ruhland 'Blesses' Campaign For 800 Aides at Glenn Dale

By Adele Bernstein

Dr. George C. Ruhland, Disrtict health officer, yesterday ordered the Civilian War Services Volunteer Office to "go ahead and God bless you" on a Washington-wide campaign to recruit 800 nurses' and staff aides for Glenn Dale Sanatorium, thus reversing his stand Thursday when he saw "no hope" for the personnel crisis and asked immediate closing of at least one ward.

With the approval of Commissioner John Russell Young, who had earlier accepted Ruhland's pessimistic report that a large number of Glenn Dale's tubercular patients will have to be sent home for lack of staff, the health officer issued these instructions:

That the Volunteer Office at once undertake a program in cooperation with press, radio and other public media to inform citizens of the need for volunteers to meet the institution's emergency, and recruit 800 persons to be trained as nurses' aides and staff workers.

That Mrs. Josephine P. Prescott, head of the District Nursing Services, retain her specially appointed staff of nurses who will train the volunteers for their duties. The American Red Cross and American Women's Volunteer Service has already done and will continue their "magnificent" training program for such volunteers, Ruhland said.

That Dr. Daniel Finucane, superintendent of Glenn Dale, meet with

Soviets Take 3 Big Enemy Fortresses

3 Nazi Divisions Are Encircled In Captured Brest Litovsk

London (Saturday), July 29 (AP). Russian troops racing up the east side of the Vistula River swept to within 20 miles of Warsaw yesterday, captured the bastion of Brest Litovsk and encircled three German divisions, and in the south toppled the fortress cities of Przemsyl and Jaroslaw on the trunk railway to German Silesia.

Moscow's broadcast bulletin said the Red army, hitting toward Warsaw in pursuit of German troops reeling back into the suburbs of the Polish capital, had captured Kolbiel, 20 miles southeast of the city.

They also took Siennica, 6 miles eas of Kolbiel, and Ceglow, 13 miles northeast of Kolbiel and 30 miles east of Warsaw on the railway to Siedlce, where other units were wiping out a German garrison.

The Germans still were staggering westward all across Poland and in the Baltic states. There still was no sign of a German stand and some believed the Germans might give up Warsaw.

Almost Reach Czech Border

South and southwest of Stanislawow the Russians swept to within only a few miles of the Czech border on a 30-mile front, striking for Carpathian Mountain passes leading into Czechoslovakia and Hungary. Moscow dispatches said the Germans were retreating across the frontier.

Capping another black day for the Germans, the Soviet forces overran 960 towns and villages in addition to the major strongholds of Brest Litovsk, Przemysl and Jaroslaw.

In northern Lithuania the Russians plunged to within 50 miles of Riga, Latvian capital on the Baltic, with the capture of Joniskis, 23 miles north of Siauliai, rail junction whose capture on Thursday effectively sealed off the majority of Col. Gen. Georg Lindemann's German Baltic forces in Estonia and Latvia.

The fall of Joniskis also put the Russians within 30 miles of the rail junction of Jelgava, where a single-track railway line runs westward to the Baltic coast and thence south to Memel in East Prussia. This single rail route is the only German escape route except by sea, and Moscow dispatches said the Red Baltic Fleet was ready for any German attempt in that direction.

The Turkish home radio said that Lindemann had "sent his resignation to Adolf Hitler." The broadcast was recorded by the

Robot Assault Tapers After New Bombings

More Damage and Casualties Reported In London Area

London, July 28 (U.P.).—The flying bomb offensive against London and southern England, described by the Germans as "incessant," tapered off today after many of the winged missiles had penetrated ack-ack and fighter plane defenses to add to the mounting casualty list in the target area.

Several fires were started by bomb explosions in the London area and in towns throughout southern English counties. In one community rescue squads worked through the night by the light of flares, digging through a litter of broken beams, bricks, plaster and crushed furniture to recover the bodies of several persons trapped in the blast of one of the robots.

A bomb glided into a busy street in one southern town during the lunch hour and exploded before passersby and shoppers could reach safety.

2000 Japs Die In Vain Guam Counterblow

Pearl Harbor, July 28 (AP).—Stiffened enemy resistance on Guam, and the repulse of a fierce counter-attack in which some 2000 Japanese were eliminated, were announced today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz in his first report since Wednesday on the invasion of that Marianas Island.

Japanese on the northern sector of the invasion front, where resistance has been toughest since Yank forces landed, struck back before dawn Tuesday.

Some enemy troops succeeded in penetrating the American lines. By early morning, however, they had been hurled back, Nimitz reported.

Probably From Agana

The enemy counterattack probably was mounted from blackened and flattened Agana, island capital. Marines of the Third Division who landed below Agana had been exerting pressure for several days on the town, which is in ruins as a result of the intense preinvasion bombardment.

Naval aircraft bombed airfields near Agana on Wednesday and gun boats moved in close to shore to support the ground forces.

Infantry and Marines slashing into the defenses of Orote Peninsula, where more than 2000 Japanese are reported to be trapped, met stubborn resistance. Guam's major airfield and the Sumay naval station are situated on the northern shores of the neck of landing jutting westward from the center of the American beachhead.

Well Entrenched

The enemy force was well entrenched in dugouts and pillboxes, Nimitz reported. A considerable concentration of artillery, automatic weapons and mortars was being employed to check the American advance.

Apparently the Yanks, although aided by aerial bombardment and

Yank Airmen Raid 2 Axis Oil Plants

Britain-Based Craft Hit Merseburg; Ploesti Bombed From Italy

London, July 28 (AP).—More than 1500 American heavy bombers made two giant raids against Germany's ebbing oil supply today and Allied fighter bombers swept across the Normandy battlelines in support of the British-Canadian forces below Caen.

More than 1000 British-based Flying Fortresses and Liberators blasted the Luena synthetic oil factory at Merseburg in central Germany and 500 bombers based in the Mediterranean attacked the Romanian oil center of Ploesti for the third time in the last three days.

Counting fighter escorts, from 3500 to 4000 craft made the two two assaults.

The blow at the Merseburg plant, damaged in attacks July 20 and July 22, cost seven bombers and two fighters, while five enemy fighters were shot down.

Ploesti statistics were not announced.

The Allied planes supporting the ground forces on the eastern Normandy flank swept across the battlelines at near tree-top level, blasting German tank concentrations and at least one time blocking a counterattack at Verriers. A number of times columns of from 25 to 30 tanks were driven off the roads and into nearby woods.

Ninth Air Force fighter bombers based in France destroyed more than 40 tanks and shot up at least 65 others during Wednesday's fighting alone.

Again Thursday night RAF Mosquitos stung Stuttgart, which was blasted Monday and Tuesday nights by more than 4000 tons of heavy explosives and 57,000 incendiaries,

2 Columns In Coutances, 3d Drives Southward

Menace All of Foe's Defenses In West; Fleeing Nazis Strafed

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Saturday), July 29 (AP).—Two covering U. S. tank columns smashed into the northern edge of Coutances yesterday and a third launched southwestward to within 18 miles of Avranches at the base of Breton Peninsula in a drive threatening to cave in all the enemy's western Normandy defenses and open a route to inland France.

As suicide squads fought back from doomed Coutances—once the western Normandy transport hub of the enemy — squadron upon squadron of dive-bombers hammered columns of the fleeing enemy on the road south, littering it with the burning hulks of wrecked equipment.

Heavy Attack Beaten Off

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel threw in a heavy attack as one armored force in a lightning five-mile lunge toward this escape route from Notre Dame-DeCenilly pulled up at St. Denis-Le Gast, eight miles southeast of Coutances and about seven miles east of the road. The attack was quickly beaten off.

A column apparently bound for the Breton Peninsula farther east overran Maupertuis—whose capture was confirmed by the midnight communique—and in an eight-miles gain drove to within less than a mile of Percy, 18 miles northeast of Avranches, a field dispatch said.

Enemy positions were buckling along an 18-mile front from Tessy-Sur-Vire to Coutances.

On the coastal route, the communique said, a tank column in a 9-mile drive down from Periers met the tanks whic hhad spurted 5 miles down the road from Marigny, site of the breakthrough on the first day of the offensive Tuesday.

At the other end of the line, a powerful tank force in another 5-mile gain seized Tessy-Sur-Vire, 1 0miles south of St. Lo and halfway to Vire, a good road center and the old capital of lower Normandy.

Only a thin 30-mile triangle, formed by Coutances, Vire and Avranches, remained in enemy hands of the Normandy Peninsula, and Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's tanks were plunging unchecked into this territory.

Fluid fighting spread over 200 square miles, probably the largest battle in western Europe in this war, frone-line dispatches said, and the bag of prisoners neared 5000. The Americans have buried 8918 enemy dead in four days of fighting, these reports said.

Far behind the spearheads the battlefield was littered with hundreds of vehicles, and thousands of stragglers resisted the mop-up squads moving in to solidify control of the base of the peninsula.

Retreat in Disorder

The Germans had paid a heavy price to extricate the bulk of seven mauled divisions from the pocket above Coutances. Veteran pilots flying over the scene said the enemy's retreat was more disorderly than his rout in North Africa.

Dispatches from the Caen front said wetsward movement of German transport had been spotted, indicating Rommel was taking the gamble of moving forces from Caen to meet the American menace.

The Germans were seen "digging in for all they are worth" south of Bernard L. Montgomery's next Caen in preparation for Gen. Sir blow.

As six American tank columns roared on south unchecked, German broadcasts began preparing the home front for the loss of strategic Avranches and Vifire, 30 and 20 miles, respectively, below the umpoff around St. Lo. The column driving toward Avranches was the farthest south.

'New Deal's Political Arm'

Dies Wants Hatch Act Probe Of CIO Calls to Government

By the Associated Press

Accompanied by a list of 72 telephone calls, including some from CIO Political Action Committee officials to the White House, a report labeling the PAC as "the political arm of the New Deal Administration" was made public yesterday by Representative Martin Dies (D., Tex.).

It was prepared by Robert E. Stripling, chief investigator for the special House Committee on un-American Activities headed by Dies.

In releasing the report, Dies made public a letter he sent to other committee members suggesting that the information be turned over to Attorney General Biddle with the recommendation "that he institute an immediate investigation as to possible violations of the Hatch Act." This law forbids political activity by certain Federal officeholders.

What action the committee would take, Stripling said, would depend on replies to Dies' letter.

"From examining the personnel of the PAC and considering the constant communication existing between the PAC and certain Government officials, I am of the opinion that the CIO Political Action Committee is in reality not so much a labor political committee as it is the political arm of the New Deal Administration," Stripling said in the report.

Attached to the document was a record of telephone calls, most of them from the PAC's New York offices to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and high Government officials, including Biddle, OWI Chief Elmer Davis, Price Administrator Chester Bowles and Labor Secretary Frances Perkins. Most of the calls were made between last December and May of this year, all at the expense of the Political Action Committee, Stripling said.

The nature of the calls was not revealed, if it was known by Stripling. One call to Mrs. Roosevelt, on February 2, lasted eight minutes. It was made by C. B. Baldwin, former director of the Farm Security Administration and now a PAC official.

Telephone and telegraph records on which the report was based were subpenaed from the New York telephone company and the Western Union Telegraph Co.

Some of the calls and telegrams, the report said, were made during periods of intense preelection activity in Alabama, where the committee vice chairman, Representative Joe Starnes, Democrat, was defeated; in Idaho, were Senator

Navy Admits Marked Ballots Received From Voters Abroad

By the United Press

The Navy Department acknowledged last night that a few marked Federal ballots had been received from naval personnel overseas in violation of the October 2 deadline set forth in the Soldier Vote Act.

The Navy said that it had mailed some sealed Federal ballots overseas but that no ballots had been distributed within the United States. Those shipped overseas, it said, were plainly marked "not to be opened until or after October 2." These instructions apparently were ignored, it added.

The Navy statement was issued after California Secretary of State Frank M. Jordon charged that some California servicemen overseas had been issued Federal ballots for the November election without being given an opportunity to use State ballots.

Republican National Committeeman Raymond Haight of Los Angeles called for a congressional investigation. "On the basis of the facts available it is too early to conclude how much is fraud and how much is stupidity," he said. "In any event, our armed forces are the victims."

The War Department said meanwhile that ballots have been received prematurely in Iowa, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and California. Careful investigation, however, showed that none was marked by Army personnel, it said.

The Navy Judge Advocate General's office said that an inquiry

Missourians Seek Street in State's Honor

"Not lettin gany grass grow under its feet, the Missouri delegation in Congress plans to keep its State in the public eye here.

How? Simple but effective—get a street named properly. So, Congressman Marion T. Bennett (R., Mo.) will intrdouce a bill in the House in September to change Nichols ave. to Missouri ave.

Mr. Truman, that Democrat, already had occasion to draw attention to his native State. Congressman Bennett generously asknowledged this yesterday, and even added:

"If I were a Democrat, why I'd argue that some part of Washington ought to be named after the home State of the next Vice President."

At any rate, this is a non-partisan venture, and the District Commissioners have been informed of the plan. Congressman Bennett is sure nothing will interfere with his plan between now and September.

had determined that the men who had mailed ballots prematurely might be given another chance to vote, since the ballots already received cannot be counted.

A total of 7,600,000 Federal ballots was printed, of which 3,800,000 are for the Army, 3,400,000 for the Navy and 400,000 for the War Shipping Administration. The Soldier Vote Act provides that they are to be distributed only to servicemen unable to obtain ballots from their home States. In no case are they to be distributed prior to October 2.

Some From Army, Too

New York, July 28 (AP).—Twenty-five or 30 Federal war ballots—invalid in New York State—have been received and will be returned to the servicemen who sent them Chairman William T. Simpson of the State War Ballot Commission said today.

"We will arrange to communicate with the servicemen, explaining that their votes are not valid here, and enclosing applications for the State ballot," Simpson declared.

He said some of the ballots had been received even before the Republican and Democratic national conventions in Chicago.

Under Federal law, ballots should not have been distributed to overseas servicemen until after October 1, and then only when an affidavit was signed to the effect that the voter had not received his State ballot by October 1.

The New York State Legislature has established its own soldier ballot plan. The Federal ballot has not been certified for use.

Simpson said "it is my impression that several of the ballots were marked by men with APO addresses which would indicate they are in the Army."

In Washington, Col. Robert Cutler, executive officer of the United States Ballot Commission, said yesterday the early distribution of the ballots "is neither carelessness, chicanery nor fraud, but it may be a case of an honest mistake."

DIES

D. Worth Clark, Democrat, was defeated, and in Texas, where Dies himself decided not to run after labor groups came out against him.

Between December, 1943, and May, 1944, Stripling reported, 13 calls were made to David K. Niles at the White House, 11 of them by Baldwin and two by Sidney Hillman, head of the CIO Political Action Committee. Niles is an administrative assistant to the President.

Other White House calls listed were from Baldwin to Mrs. Roosevelt, from Hillman to Mrs. Roosevelt, from Hillman to Jonathan Daniels, assistant to the President; and from the New York PAC office to Lowell Mellett, formerly a presidential assistant; to Samuel Rosenman, a special counsel to the President, and to a "Miss Dutchess," who was not otherwise identified.

Other calls were listed to various Government agencies.

U. S. Officeholders Named

[Stripling was quoted by the United Press as saying that many PAC officials made calls on behalf of the CIO while they were still on the Government payroll. He mentioned Baldwin, C. A. McPeak, former War Production Board labor representative, now PAC Texas director; Charlotte Carr, formerly of the War Manpower Commission, now PAC New York director; Raymond S. McKeough, former Illinois Congressman, now PAC director for Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, and George S. Mitchell, former assistant farm security administrator, now PAC director for Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Utah adn Arizona.—Editor's Note.]

Several committee members, Stripling said, including Representatives Thomas (R., N. J.), Busbey (R., Ill.), and Mundt (R., S. Dak.) have indicated a desire for "a continued and thorough investigation." Another committee member, Representative Eberharter (R., R.), made public this telegram sent to Dies at Jasper, Texas:

"I do not like remote control from Jasper. Request you call a meeting of committee as quickly as possible which you can attend in person."

Annihilating 3 Divisions

The Moscow bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor said that three Nazi divisions had been encircled westof Brest Litovsk, have been pressed against the Bug River and are being annihilated by Russian troops.

Soviet bombers on Thursday night attacked rail junctions at Warsaw and Insterburg in German East Prussia, blowing up military dumps, smashing trains and setting many fires.

In a late broadcast, the Berlin radio quoted the German high command as suggesting that "a radical shortening of the German front" was under way.

One German broadcast earlier had said that Kaunas, former Lithuanian capital, 45 miles from German East Prussia, had been abandoned, but later Berlin reports failed to mention the city and suggested that it still was being bitterly defended. The Germans were withstanding heavy two-day assaults just east of the city, Berlin said.

For the present, while the desperate shortage of workers continues, one ward (white, female) will be closed down, Dr. Ruhland said.

"But if the public responds to this renewed effort, we shall reopen the ward and be in a position to resume full operation at Glenn Dale," he told The Post last night.

CONGRESS

ization and surplus war property legislation.

Reynolds' committee will consider both the George-Murray and Kilgore demobilization bills, and very likely a new Murray bill.

Kilgore Cites Need for Action

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), author of a very comprehensive measure, in calling for speeding of congressional action, emphasized that reconversion legislation is need not only to face squarely the problems of peace, but also to maintain an orderly war production program during the difficult period of partial cutbacks.

His bill is supported by the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the Railroad Brotherhoods.

The special House committee, headed by Representative William M. Colmer (D., Miss.), considering reconversion problems has been notified by McCormick to return Tuesday.

Representative John J. Cochran (D., Mo.) joined in the call for Congress to come back to work.

"We have passed a law that will take care of the termination of contracts so far as the corporations are concerned, but we have failed to do anything to prevent widespread unemployment when war plants shut down. Plants cannot be reconverted overnight. When contracts are cancelled millions of men and women war-workers will have no place to go."

Bonus Proposal Offered

Leaders of both parties have expressed the belief that adequate demobilization legislation providing for unemployment benefits might check the rapidly spreading exodus of warworkers from plants producing materials of war vitally needed now.

One suggestion, made by a leading industrialist, would provide demobilization legislation specifically divided into two phases—one covering the situation until after the collapse of Germany, and the second covering the period necessary to defeat Japan.

Under this plan, small bonuses would be paid to those workers who stayed at their posts on urgent war programs through the western phases, and a larger bonus would go to those who stayed right through the time necessary to defeat Japan.

have been a test bomb because of the smallness of its explosives charge. The broadcast added that unconfirmed reports told of other robot bombs in the same area yesterday.)

Meanwhile, the weekly Spectator today paid tribute to American airmen who have concentrated devastating attacks against the flying bomb launching platforms in northern France. "Far more sorties against that objective have been flown by the Americans than the RAF," the newspaper said. "In a way there is nothing in that. This is one war and whatever needs to be done is done by the national force most readily available for that particular job.

Peril to Air Supremacy Seen

"But here is a form of attack aimed particularly at the civilian population and when we as civilians owe so much in this particular field to our American Allies who risk and sacrifice their lives in our defense it is bare decency to acknowledge our debt with warm cordiality."

The magazine Aeroplane said that the intensity of recent air attacks on German factories producing propulsion units for the flying bombs "indicates that development of production of jet-propelled fighters by the Germans is sufficiently far advanced to constitute a threat to Allied air supremacy over Europe."

Turkish Break With Germany May Be Near

By Flora Lewis
Associated Press Staff Writer

Adolf Hitler today faced the growing possibility of a collapse on his Balkan front.

Heavily censored reports from Ankara indicate that Turkey may be about to break relations with the Nazis, a move which not only would cut off all Hitler's economic and spy activities in the Near East but which might quickly lead to war.

At the same time, Ankara said that Bulgaria is negotiating with the Allies to get out of the war.

Acting Secretary of State Stettinius said he had no information on such talks, but expert observers here were not surprised at the dispatch.

Bulgaria has been sitting shakily on the Axis side of the fence with one foot tossed over the top, by virtue of maintaining peaceful relations with Russia.

Now that the Red Army has pushed into Rumania, a strong Turkish move toward the United Nations camp would leave Bulgaria virtually encircled.

Reports that Turkey was considering new steps against the Axis have been current for several days, and disclosure that the Turkish Ambassador to Berlin has been recalled to Ankara made a break with the Nazis seem imminent.

German Ambassador Fritz von Papen left his post in Ankara two weeks ago to report on the situation to Berlin.

How sono Turkey would be likely to enter hostilities after a break with the Nazis is a matter of conjecture, depending on Berlin's reaction. However, if Turkey clearly abandons strict neutrality, German forces in the whole Balkan Peninsula would be endangered.

Greece could be turned into a gigantic trap for the Nazis, hemmed there between the Allies in Italy and tottering Bulgaria.

Recent reports of home front disintegration have had significant effects on the satellites and nearby Turkey, and conversely, a Balkan blow-up would be a shattering blow to Nazi propagandists' efforts to bolster their defeat-distressed population.

Habeas Corpus Writ Refused In Murder Case

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the United States Court of Appeals yesterday denied a habeas corpus writ to Stanford Carrier, 26, who sought either an immediate trial on a first-degree murder charge against him or his freedom on $5000 bond pending trial. Carrier has been in jail for 17 months.

Justice Groner said the writ should not be issued "until application is first made to one of the justices of the District Court." He added that "the Government should be required at the earliest possible moment to award petitioner trial."

The jurist ordered that if the Government is not ready for trial sometime in September, the date now set, that Carrier might then apply for bond.

The defendant is accused of deliberately driving an automobile over Paul Higgins, 55-year-old World War I veteran. George Burton, hospital orderly, was sentenced recently to a seven-to-25-year sentence following conviction in the same case.

Poliomyelitis On Increase, Doctors Say

Nineteen medical officials, meeting here yesterday with Health Officer George C. Ruhland to survey the infantile paralysis situation, reported an increase in the disease both locally and nationally in the last year and admitted only limited knowledge of its spread and control.

Represented at the poliomyelitis conference in Municipal Center were the United States Children's Bureau, War Production Board, District Medical Society, War Department, District Chapter of the Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, as well as health officers of Arlington, Montgomery, Alexandria and Prince Georges Counties.

The increase in infantile paralysis cases applied particularly to the Eastern States, it was pointed out.

To combat further spread of the disease, the medical officials adopted recommendations stressing early diagnosis and isolation of such cases. They urged parents to call a physician when children exhibit such symptoms as headache, fever, upset stomach, nausea and vomiting and soreness and stiffness of the neck.

Travel, particularly in such infected areas as North Carolina, was discouraged by the group, as was any type of crowd contact.

Meanwhile, two paralysis victims under experimental treatment at Children's Hospital were progressing yesterday. Both reported in "fair condition," they are Judith Becker, 9, who is being treated with penicillin, and 21-month-old Eileen Deacon, on whome prostigmine is being used.

His accusatoin was male in a joint broadcast from Moscow with Gen. Rola-Zymierski, whom the committee appointed commander in chief of the united Polish army.

AFL to Bargain For Industrial Insurance Agents

The Industrial and Ordinary Insurance Agents Council, AFL, became the collective bargaining representative of industrial insurance agents of the Life Insurance Co. of Virginia in a National Labor Relations Board election yesterday.

A NLRB spokesman said that 19 out of the 21 employes involved voted for the union. Cashiers, clerks, special agents and all supervisory employes were excluded from the election by NLRB order.

The company's offices are at the Transportation Building.

Rail Labor Paper Rebukes CIO's PAC

Labor, weekly publication of 15 railroad unions, yesterday stated that recent activities of the CIO Political Action Committee were "full of ominous possibilities for the entire labor movement" and might injure President Roosevelt's candidacy for a fourth term.

The blast by Labor represented the third attack on the CIO group within the week. The AFL Weekly News Service and the United Mine Workers Journal have also disavowed their activities. Most of the railroad unions are affiliated with the AFL, although some are unaffiliated, as are the United Mine Workers.

Although the bulk of the labor vote is expected to go to Roosevelt, informed observers believed that these attacks might win some labor supporters for the Republican ticket. Herbert Brownell, jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee, has predicted that GOP Candidate Thomas E. Dewey will poll a substantial labor vote.

Opposes Six-Millions Fund

Labor complained about PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman's announced intention to raise two political funds of three million dollars each to elect Roosevelt and also his policy of collaborating with Communists in New York State and other areas.

"No fair-minded American can question the right of workers to organize for political purposes and to ardently support their friends and oppose their enemies," Labor stated in an editorial. "However, if Mr. Hillman, or anyone else, imagines that a proposal to raise six million dollars to control a presidential campaign will not cause the most serious repercussions from one end of this country to the other, he simply does not know the American people.

"Inevitably, Mr. Hillman's program will strengthen the hands of organized labor's foes and increase the demand for more rigid regulation of labor unions . . . Unfortunately while the great majority of trade unionists have no interest in or sympathy for Mr. Hillman's grandiose plan, the entire labor movement is likely to feel the sting of popular disapproval."

Error Claimed

Japs Deny Execution of B-29 Fliers

London, July 28 (AP).—The Japanese today formally denied that they had executed American airmen from Superfortresses which raided Japan and said an "erroneous interpretation" had been placed on a broadcast by their Singapore propaganda station July 15.

The Singapore broadcast had stated that some B-29 fliers "bailed out to meet with the same fate which was meted out to the raiders of Tokyo some two years ago."

Some of the Tokyo raiders were executed, and the U. S. State Department made inquiries through Switzerland after the Singapore broadcast to learn whether the B-29 airmen similarly had been put to death.

"Twisted Interpretation"

In reply, the Japanese foreign office sent a memorandum through the Swiss "which flatly denied" that the fliers had been executed, said today's broadcast, quoting Sadao Iguchi of the Japanese Information Board. The statement continued:

"He added it seems that the American inquiry has arisen from a twisted interpretation of an English broadcast given by the Shonan (Singapore) radio in connection with the Kyushu raid. The Spokesman quoted the broadcast, which said "the raiding B-29 bombers, by being shot down out of the skies of Japan, had thus come with a one-way ticket to hell."

Silent on Tokyo Raiders

In addition to stating that the B-29 fliers had met "the same fate" as the Tokyo raiders, the Singapore broadcast of July 15 had asserted:

"Any Allied airman who falls or bails out over Japan will be executed. This is the order of the day."

As recently as Wednesday British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that the United States Government and the American people could British government in bringing to rely on the full support of the justice all Japanese who had taken part in any executions.

The Japanese had nothing to say today regarding the executions of the Tokyo raiders, which they once boasted about in official broadcasts and which President Roosevelt confirmed.

D. C. Patrolman Appeals Verdict In Assault Case

Robert S. Hall, District patrolman found guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon upon Raymond W. Parks, 19, Kensington, Md., taxi driver, yesterday posted $1000 bond at the Bethesda Police Court before Judge Albert E. Brault.

He will appeal his case to the Montgomery County Circuit Court. Given until yesterday to pay a $250 fine or serve three months in the Maryland House of Correction, Hall was sentenced following his trial a week ago Friday.

Parks charged that Hall fired four shots at his cab while driving out Wisconsin ave., May 31, about 1:45 a. m., without bearing any identification that he was a policeman. At the trial Hall said he chased the taxi from just below the District-Maryland line to Drummond st., Bethesda, when he saw the car speeding. He admitted firing the shots, two of which landed in the rear of the cab occupied by a naval officer. Park was found guilty of speeding and driving with an expired operator's license. He was fined $35 for both offenses.

Mrs. Frances Buckner

Funeral services for Mrs. Frances Levy Buckner, 65, of 3000 Connecticut ave. nw. were held yesterday in Danzansky funeral parlors, with burial in Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery. She died here Wednesday.

Born in New York, she came to Washington as a child and was educated here. She was a charter member of William F. Hunt Chapter, No. 16, Order of the Eastern Star, and a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Prince Georges Scouts Given Camp Funds

Less than 350 of the more than 5000 persons who received appeals for funds to aid the Prince Georges County Boy Scout campaign for a camp near Greenbelt have responded, Sam Ormes, publicity chairman for the drive, announced yesterday.

Those who did contribute, however, Ormes said, gave large amounts, and the fund has collected approximately $2350. The drive officially is scheduled to close Monday night.

A 50-acre camp site has been obtained through efforts of a group of citizens of the county, and the service clubs of the county have contributed the funds which made possible construction of an administration building in 1941.

The campaign committee is headed by Louis B. Arnold, and donations to the fund to extend the scouting facilities of the county should be mailed to him at the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Company, Hyattsville.

10,852 Dogs Inoculated

Inoculation tags were issued for 10,852 dogs in the recent rabies immunization campaign conducted in Prince Georges County, according to Dr. C. J. Gibbs, county veterinarian in charge of the inoculations.

The county quarantine against dogs running at large was extended to August 12, and it was assumed that all dogs running at large would be strays. Instead, many of the dogs picked up by the dog catchers have been found to have inoculation tags, and in a number of instances dogs which had been immunized were recognized at large without their tags on.

Need for cooperation by the public was urged by Dr. Gibbs, who said that stamping out of rabies will require that dogs comply with the quarantine to enable the police and dog catchers to clean out strays. Dogs captured running at large are taken to the pound and are disposed of within three days if they are not claimed. At the end of the 30-day quarantine dogs which have been inoculated may run at large if they wear the special inoculation tag.

Duce Slashed Wrist Shortly Before Rescue

Rome, July 28 (AP).—Benito Mussolini slashed a wrist with a razor blade in a half-hearted attempt at suicide only a few hours before German parachutists freed him from the Hotel Campo Imperatore atop the bleak Gran Sasso last September, a reliable informant said today.

This informant, who requested anonymity, said the fallen Italian dictator's "suicide scene" took place as follows:

"On September 12, about 3 a. m., carabinieri who were at Mussolini's disposal and occupied an adjoining room, hurried to the superior officer and told him that Il Duce was almost hysterical. The officer ran to Mussolini's room and found him standing up. One wrist was cut and blood had stained a pajama sleeve. Mussolini held a razor blade in the other hand.

"'I am tired of living,' Mussolini said. He handed the officer a letter in which he had written that he wished to end his life. The officer treated the cut, calmed the Duce and, without much difficulty, persuaded him to return to bed."

Mussolini was said to have expressed fear that he would be turned over to the Allies.

4 Field Fires Fought In County Six Hours

Four field fires in the Hunting Hill-Quince Orchard section of Montgomery County kept firemen from the Gaithersburg, Rockville and Kensington volunteer departments battling flames for six hours yesterday afternoon.

A house occupied by Negroes, at Muddy Branch was destroyed. Hay stacks on the farm of Clifton Viers near Rockville caught afire as flames swept across his farm. The firemen stopped the blaze from spreading to nearby barns.

Soldeirs May Delay Missouri Vote Count

Jefferson City, Mo., July 28 (AP). Missouri will have its Statewide primaries Tuesday, but—

It may be days before a candidate will know for certain if he has been nominated.

An Associated Press survey today showed that there already have been 30,000 requests from soldiers for absentee ballots.

The Governor of North Carolina is the only governor in the Union without the power of legislative veto.

Opposing Forces Rush Tanks Into Spreading Hunan Battles

Chungking, July 28 (AP).—Both sides are rushing up tanks and infantry in the spreading battles of Hunan Province, whose key rail city of Hengyang remains firmly in Chinese hands despite more than a month of unrelenting Japanese assault, a Chinese army spokesman declared tonight.

As the battle for Hengyang and its strategic outposts to the north and south spilled over into Kiangsi Province on the east, Chinese and American planes swarmed to the support of ground forces by raking enemy transport and positions.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, Army spokesman, estimated that the Japanese have thrown 250,000 troops into the Hunan battle—part of Japanese strategy to split China in half—but said they were rotated so that the number fighting at any one time actually was much smaller.

Special Supply Road Built

So heavy have been Allied air raids on the great Siang River, a channel of supply for the enemy from his north Hunan base of Yochow to the Hengyang battlefield, that a highway has been built from Yochow to Japanese field headquarters at Hengshan, 25 miles northwest of Hengyang, the general said.

There was no change in the situation north of Canton, where the Japanese have been stalled in an attempt to drive north to join forces with those below Hengyang.

Flee to Burma Bases

Kandy, Ceylon, July 28 (AP)—The Japanese in flight from northeast India to their Burma bases are retreating so rapidly in some sections that only demolitions and the monsoon are delaying the Allied advance, headquarters announced today.

Bitter street fighting was in progress in the enemy's stubbornly defended north Burma base of Myitkyina. Medium and heavy bombers raided the Mandalay railway yards.

WLB Post Not U. S. Service, Thomas Says

New York, July 28 (AP).—R. J. Thomas, international president of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), testified today that he does not consider his War Labor Board membership "as Federal service" or "as working for the Government."

"I am there to represent labor," said Thomas, appearing as a defense witness in the trial of Thomas de Lorenzo, president of the UAW's Brewster Aircraft Local, who is charged with filing a false statement with the Federal Civil Service Commission when appointed to a WLB regional panel.

"I asked Mr. De Lorenzo to serve and urged it on him as a patriotic duty," Thomas said. "I did not consider it Federal service or a Federal job. I don't consider my own job on the national board as Federal service."

Cross-examined by Assistant U. S. Attorney Thomas F. Murphy, he said he considered it "my specific duty to nominate only CIO members" to serve on panels.

After Thomas' testimony, the trial adjourned until Monday.

Arrests Are Listed

The Government charged that De Lorenzo, in submitting an affidavit in connection with his appointment to the WLB panel, stated he never had been arrested or indicted except for traffic violations, and that he was employed as an aircraft assembler when actually he was in the wine business.

Murphy said at the time of De Lorenzo's indictment on March 31 that De Lorenzo had been arrested three times.

Murphy said those occasions were on March 15, 1933, in New York, on a disorderly conduct charge; on December 16, 1933, on a somicide by automobile charge, and on July 7, 1941, in Hackensack, N. J., on charges of inciting a riot and malicious mischief.

De Lorenzo also was indicted on the latter charge, Murphy said.

Hospital Plane Fall Kills 22; 20 From U. S.

London, July 28 (U.P.).—Twenty-two persons, including at least 19 American soldiers wounded in Normandy, were killed last night when a huge CE-47 hospital plane crashed near Mull-of-Gallaway on the west coast of Scotland, the Ninth Air Force announced today.

All those on board were killed, among them a United States Army nurse and an RAF airman. The accident was the first to the transporting of thousands of wounded from battle lines by the Air Evacuation Flight Command.

War Prisoner Shot

Newark, N. J., July 28 (U.P.).—A German prisoner was shot and seriously wounded today when he attempted to escape from a raliroad train near Monmouth Juunction, N. J., Army authorities announced.

The prisoner, they said, was being transferred under armed guard from a prison camp at Little Rock, Ark., to Mason General Hospital, Brentwood, Long Island.

Italian Soldier Party Canceled On Legion Kick

Chambersburg, Pa., July 28 (AP). Maj. J. C. Wilson, administrative officer of the Letterkenny Army Ordnance Depot, said today a weekend party at Jeanette, Pa., for 25 Italian soldiers had been canceled for "military reasons," and that the soldiers were not war prisoners, but former prisoners who had volunteered for quartermaster service in the United States Army under the War Department regulations.

The cancellation followed protests by Frank X. Murray, commander of the Pennsylvania State Department of the American Legion, who had referred to the Italians as "war prisoners" and said the entertainment was "an insult to those of our boys who will never return as a result of the Italian campaign."

The party had been arranged by the Garibaldi Society of Jeannette.

Earlier in a telegram sent to the State's two United States Senators late yesterday, Commander Murray said "the American Legion will never permit the white crosses of the Anzio beachhead to become smirched by this unthinking, indecent action."

Planners Reply

Investigation Of Deckman Group Asked

Demands for investigation of the Joseph Deckman Committee, whic recently launched an attack on activities of the Washington Housing Association, were made yesterday by the Citizens' Council on Community Planning.

Firing another shot in the word battle raging between Deckman, the Community Chest which finances the WHA and the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, the Council stated:

"To imply that the Community Chest would lend its weight and authority to a distortion of facts by one of its member agencies is to indulge in mud-slinging of a particularly vicious kind. . . . The accusation of axe-grinding is particularly inappropriate coming from the chairman of a housing and rent control committee who is himself in the building supply business."

The attack follows Joseph Deckman's open letter Wednesday in which he criticized the Washington Housing Association for sending out "anonymous literature giving a distorted picture concerning slum clearance and low-rent housing" and called it "an exclusive group financed by the Chest." In a separate statement he charged Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d with "supersalesmanship" in a 'vast and rather visionary scheme."

The Citizens' Council on Community Planning, an outgrowth of the housing conference held May 13, and of which Mrs. William H. Wells is temporary chairman, bolstered its demands for an investigation on the grounds that one committee of the federation is "maing public statements in the name of the entire federation," and that "its claim to speak for tht citizens of Washington . . . is at the very least open to skepticism."

Referring to the Chest, the statement declared: "This attempt to bring pressure to bear upon the direcetors of the Chest to withdraw the annual allotment of the WHA appears to partake of the nature of intimidation."

Antoine E. Willmett

Funeral services of Antoine Edward Willmett, 45, 807 Richmond ave., Silver Spring, American Indian employed with the Government in Washington since 1926, will be held today at 10:30 a. m. at the Warner Pumphrey Funeral Home, 8434 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md. The Rev. Leo McCormick of St. Michael's Catholic Church will conduct the service. Burial will be in Washington Memorial Park.

Mr. Willmett, an assistant group superintendent for FWA, died of a heart attack Thursday afternoon while crossing the B. and O. railroad tracks near Bliss Electrical School, Silver Spring. He was formerly an accountant for the Department of Agriculture and had also worked for the old Buildings and Parks Administration.

Born in Maud, Ikla., he was a member of the Potawatomie Tribe and was a graduate of Benjamin Franklin University. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Teresa Willmett and a daughter, Catherine.

Bergson Calls For Shelters In Palestine

Immediate establishment of emergency refugee shelters in Palestine for tens of thousands of Jews from Hungary, "threatened with deportation and death," was demanded by Chairman Peter H. Bergson of the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation yesterday.

Asserting that "British colonial policy in regard to Palestine has not changed one iota despite three million Jewish casualties in Europe," Bergson declared the British government would commit a "crime which cannot be forgiven" if they refused to accept the offer of the Hungarian regime to release all Jews with Palestinian visas rather than send them to the Gestapo dungeons of Poland.

Receiving the press in his spacious office at newly established headquarters of the committee at 2315 Massachusetts ave. nw., Bergson revealed that an aurgent appeal for the Palestine shelters was cabled to Prime Minister Churchill Monday. No reply from any British authority had yet been received, he said.

Lessay Found Bristling With Mines, Traps

Lessay, France, July 28 (AP).—Americans moved into this elaborately mined and booby-trapped town today and found four Germans seemingly more dead than alive.

The Nazis were the remnants of a small rearguard left behind to delay the occupation when the enemy began retreating last week. Instead of moving in immediately the Americans by-passed the town and smashed hilltop gun positions to the south.

Every shattered doorway was boobytrapped, every few feet of the main street mined. But despite the enemy's pains, combat engineers had Grande Rue cleared within a few hours and American columns snaking through.

A driver and another enlisted man were blown to pieces and a lieutenant colonel and a major badly mangled when an American command car hit a mine.

"I've sene lots of minefields and booby traps, but nothing to compare with this," said Capt. William Fettis, 30, White Plains, N. Y., commander of the mine-clearing crew. "Some mines were planted 12 deep, one on top of the other."

It's a Dog's Life For This Sergeant

Shaw Field, S. C. (AP).—Many an Army sergeant has been famous for his bark, but one sergeant here had to admit he had met his match. Corpl. John Lemmon's dog, following his master to work, took a dislike to Lemmon's sergeant. The sergeant went up a tree with the dog on his heels.

Landlady Had Willies

Memphis, Tenn. (AP). — When Willie Mae Brown rented a room, the landlady said: "My husband's name is Willie, your name is Willie, my name happens to be Willie, and we have another boarder whose name is Willie and his son is Willie, jr."

Club Owner Awaits Gas Ration Hearing

Joseph R. Burko, 33, dismissed Police Court clerk and now part owner of the Lamplighter Club at 1401 Q st. nw., today awaits further hearing scheduled August 4 on charges that he illegally possessed gas coupons which police said he purchased from two Arlington youths now under arrest for robbing a post office of coupons worth 40,000 gallons of gas.

Burko surrendered himself yesterday before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage after OPA and postal officials, accompanied by police, conducted a 12-man raid on his club. He was released on $3000 bond.

Attorney Sol Lichtenberg told reporters that no evidence of any kind was found against Burko nor was a single ration coupon located on the premises.

According to the OPA charge, Burko purchased the coupons July 12 from Clifton K. Grossman, 21, an Arlington youth now out on $3000 bond, who with Raymond L. Cruger of the same city, is charged with the Falls Church, Va., post-office robbery of ration books.

District and Virginia OPA officials, postal agents and police are still working together to break widespread black market operations in this area said to have sprung from the Falls Church post-office theft.

Farmers Abandon Plows to Join Rush for Gold

Val D'Or, Quebec, July 28 (U.P.).—This peaceful agricultural community tried to live up to its name—Valley of Gold—today as farmers put away their plows and joined old-time prospectors in a modern gold rush.

The rush began when a gold bearing break was discovered at nearby Amos. Word of the find spread rapidly, and in 24 hours the recording officer ran out of stake claiming license forms and had to petition Quebec for more.

Mrs. Viola MacMillan, president of the Prospectors and Developers Association, arrived from Toronto shortly after the word leaked out, and said she was forming three companies to prospect the farm country between Porcupine Break and Barraute Township.

British Sink Nazi E-Boat

London, July 28 (U.P.).—Light British coastal forces met a strong force of German E-boats northwest of Cape D'Antifer yesterday, and in a brisk skirmish sank one of the boats and scored hits on several others, the Admiralty announced today.

The enemy sank one British motor torpedo boat, and so severely damaged another that other British vessels sank it after taking off the survivors. British casualties were small.

The heaviest shipment by air express last year was a bulky propeller shaft weighing 2200 pounds, which was rushed from the United States to South America, enabling a large factory to resume work with great saving of time.

Ancient Viols for 'Starlight' To Have 'Old-World' Setting

The concert grounds in Meridian Hill Park, site of The Post's Starlight Concerts, form a particularly appropriate setting for the music to be played tonight and tomorrow night by the Society of Ancient Instruments, with Yves Tinayre as assisting vocalist.

Situated on a hill, the tree-shaded pavilion is arranged around a sizable pool in which four floodlighted fountains splash. There is always a cooling breeze blowing across the water. Sitting under the open sky with the moon and stars shining, it is difficult to believe that you are in the midst of a great city.

The audiences at the Starlight Concerts are friendly and informal. Shirtsleeves and cigarettes are in order, and there is no rule against holding hands, if an agreeable hand is available. During intermission people gather around the pool, watching the fountains and chatting.

The setting suggests the Old World parks in which much of the music to be performed by the Society of Ancient Instruments was first heard. These songs, dances, and concert pieces, all dating from the 18th century and earlier, will be a surprise to many listeners. Gay, melodically simple and full of rhythmic life, they have a charm and color quite distinct from classical music.

All of the instruments used by the society are authentic viols of the sort that preceded the stringed instruments now in vogue. Of particular interest is the viola d'amour, played by Ben Stad, director of the group, which produces a unique tone by using sympathetic strings.

Tickets for the concerts may be obtained until 5 p.m. today at the Cappel Concert Bureau in Ballard's, 13th and G sts. nw., and prior to the concerts at the box-office in Meridian Hill Park.

Strategic Retreat

Washington's crisis in the care of tuberculosis patients ought not to be minimized. Tuberculosis is a notorious killer. If it is not kept rigidly under control, it can be far more devastating in its effects upon our entire population than is war. The fight to keep the disease from spreading while our manpower shortage is so acute must thus be regarded as a vital part of the home-front campaign to preserve the health and strength of the Nation.

Apparently there was no alternative to the emergency program that the Commissioners have put into effect on recommendation of Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, and Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the District Bureau for Tuberculosis. The attempt to get volunteer help at Glenn Dale Sanatorium was a failure. Some of the wards will therefore have to be closed, and patients whose cases are not communicable will have to be transferred to the more accessible Upshur Street Hospital. Patients nearing recovery will have to be discharged from Upshur Street and nonresident patients will have to be sent back to their home States.

One important step toward prompt discovery of new tuberculosis cases was taken recently when the Civil Service Commission ruled that Government employes must have their chests X-rayed within five days of their appointment, also when shifting within the service from jobs held for more than six months. It would be far better, however, to have this test for tuberculosis made before new Government workers leave their home States to come to Washington. Considering the seriousness of the local problem, health officials should have little difficulty in persuading the CSC to tighten up its order in this respect, except possibly in cases of great emergency.

It is well to remember, too, that at best the program now going into effect is a strategic retreat to prevent more serious losses. That means that the operation of the new program must be carefully watched and the Health Department must be ready to step in at any moment to order further changes of tactics when and if they appear to be necessary.

Staff For Congress

Our interest in the story that Mrs. Truman is drawing a salary of $4700 or more as secretary to her husband, the vice presidential nominee on the Democratic ticket, is confined to its relationship to the important subject of staffing the committees of Congress. We have often pointed out that congressional committees are shamefully undermanned. They have work of great importance to do. Yet Congress seldom allows them enough experts to dig out and correlate the facts they need to guide legislative policy. Compared to the batteries of experts, technologists, research and publicity men granted the executive departments, few, if any, of the committees of Congress are adequately staffed.

Some of the special committees have fared much better in this respect than the regular standing committees. The Truman Committee, for example, has the full-time services of about 15 lawyers, accountants and investigators in addition to its stenographers and typists. Most of the regular committees are still without expert assistance, excepting such aid as they may obtain from the small staff of the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress. In our opinion Congress has unwisely denied itself the assistance that it unquestionably needs to explore the fields in which its legislative judgment must operate.

The most unfortunate fact about the salary that Mrs. Truman is drawing from the Senate, therefore, is that it may seriously interfere with the movement to provide adequate congressional staffs. Congress has always been very sensitive about increasing its own payroll. Members who must face the electorate frequently are always aware of the fact that they will be criticized for increasing governmental expenses to lessen their own heavy burden even though the public interest may be served thereby. And, of course, this criticism is greatly intensified when any funds appropriated for secretarial help or committee staffs are paid out to members of Congressmen's families.

The chief question, then, is not whether Mrs. Truman's advice and other services are worth the salary paid her. Since it is generally conceded that Senator Truman's committee investigating the war effort has done excellent work, Mrs. Truman may reasonably be entitled to some of the credit. But we fear that the public reaction may not run predominantly in that channel. The result may easily be to make critic-shy Congressmen less willing to allow funds for staffing their own committees. Indeed, adequate staffs are likely to become the rule and not the exception only when nepotism has been eliminated as a factor in their appointment.

We Are Unprepared

The splendid news from all the fighting fronts indicates that the collapse of Germany cannot be delayed long. Military warnings that the road to victory is still long and hard do not deceive the American public. Accordingly they fail to accomplish their presumed purpose of stiffening morale on the home front. At the same time this stubborn military clinging to the illusion that the European war will be indefinitely prolonged may disastrously delay preparations for demobilizing large numbers of men and speeding up industrial reconversion as war contracts are canceled. It has already given aid and comfort to the procrastinators in Congress.

The most pressing task of legislative statesmanship is to anticipate and prepare for the reconversion needs of the postwar demobilization period. With the Allied armies far advanced on the road to victory, it would not only be unstatesmanlike to prolong the congressional recess into the late fall, it would be an unpardonable demonstration of legislative irresponsibility and selfishness. Fortunately the alarm has been sounded—in time, we hope—to arouse Congress to a sense of duty. Senator Vandenberg has taken the initiative by calling a meeting of Republican Senators prior to the reconvening of Congress next week with the evident intention of blocking a move to prolong the recess. In view of the prospect of an early defeat of Germany, he thinks the Senate should complete action on pending reconversion programs at the earliest possible moment.

Leaders of organized labor are likewise alarmed at congressional dalliance which has left the country without a legislative plan for dealing with demobilization unemployment. The contract termination legislation passed just before the recess is, of course, an important aid to release of funds and settlement of claims of contractors against the Government. But that is only part of the comprehensive program required to deal with the varied problems resulting from demobilization. Richard T. Frankensteen, vice president of the United Automobile Workers, has expressed his deep concern at the inadequate preparations made so far to deal with reconversion. He points out that a German defeat this fall might mean a 40 per cent reduction in production of war equipment, with four million people out of work in consequence before the end of the year. And mass unemployment would be swollen by the return of servicemen.

As we have previously pointed out, Congress recessed before the conventions, leaving undone most of the work it must do in order to assist systematic reconversion of industry to a peacetime basis. It failed to act on pending legislation to set up an over-all coordinating agency to deal with demobilization problems. It has still to pass on proposals relating to unemployment benefits in the postwar conversion period, and on legislation for the disposal of Government-owned surplus property. No time should be lost completing the reconversion program in preparation for the emergency that lies ahead. If Congress should take time out to woo the electorate in these critical days, it would be a gross betrayal of trust that voters would undoubtedly have cause to remember in the troubled days that lie ahead.

Police Nightmares

American police chiefs, now holding their annual conference at White Plains, N. Y., are not very cheerful or comforting in their reports on the state of public morals in wartime as they find it reflected in the station-house blotters. Their principal concern seems to be with the problem of juvenile delinquency, despite recent reports from various cities showing a considerable decline in the arrests of persons under age, as compared at least to the record year of 1943. Michael F. Morrissey of Indianapolis, retiring president of the police chiefs' association, has some alarming testimony about the increase of promiscuity among young girls. They have, he asserts, become a much greater problem and menace than the professional prostitutes. He says that more than 92 per cent of all venereal infections among soldiers and sailors are traceable to the all-too-familiar type of "khaki-wacky" girl, who is to be picked up in the vicinity of railroad and bus stations, and in dance halls, taverns, parking lots and public parks. Chief Morrissey did not have much to say about the ages of these girls, but, according to authorities, most of them are extremely young.

At the same itme Chief Morrissey admitted that commercialized vice is very much on the decline. He was naturally inclined to give most of the credit for this to the vigilance and activity of police. The police, he said, have entirely cleaned out the red-light districts in more than 650 American cities. It is fairly obvious, however, that other factors are represented in the decline of prostitution. Among them is a general laxity in sexual morals affecting all classes in some degree, which finds its more extreme expression in the promiscuity which Chief Morrissey has described. Another factor is undoubtedly economic, namely, the enormous opportunities of employment at high wages which have been opened to nearly all types of women. This affords a more respectable and possibly more agreeable means of satisfying an appetite for luxury. But it seems not unlikely, that in the event of another large-scale period of depression and unemployment, many former prostitutes will revert to their previous occupation, and that many of the girls now classified as merely "promiscuous" may drift ultimately into professional prostitution.

Another thing that grievously worries the police chiefs is how they are to cope with the big epidemic of crime and violence that most of them expect to follow the war. Police Commissioner Hinkley of Connecticut foresees a crime wave that will be "the biggest and bloodiest" in history when the present generation of juvenile delinquents reaches maturity. Moreover, every demobilized Army contains a proportion of men, who after habituation to violence and danger, cannot be readjusted to the ways of peace. The proportion may be extremely small, but it can nevertheless be extremely troublesome and dangerous. At the end of the Civil War, most discharged veterans of this type drifted eventually to the frontier, but after the first World War they contributed a share to the crime wave of the 1920s.

Back To The Tank

The testimony of all the correspondents in Normandy to the magnificent tank equipment which supported the advance in Normandy is a curious footnote to attach to the criticism of that equipment which comes from the pen of Hanson W. Baldwin. Cabling to the New York Times from London, after a tour of the Normandy front, Mr. Baldwin says:

> Fifth, the German Mark V and VI tanks are superior to the Allies' best tanks, the Sherman and Cromwell. This superiority lies not only in greater armor, particularly more frontal armor, but more especially in the greater range and higher initial velocity of the new German 88-mm. gun and the 75-mm. In the open country east of the Orne River, German tanks and self-propelled guns have picked off Shermans and Cromwells well before the latter could come into effective range.

Now Mr. Baldwin is an able and responsible military observer. The feeling will arise that he is speaking not only out of his own observation but also out of a knowledge of the opinion of the using arm in the field. Yet his assertion flies in the face of the facts about the new advance which have produced the testimony from Mr. Baldwin's own colleagues about our magnificent equipment.

In time past we have editorially expressed some doubt as to whether our ordnance was measuring up to requirements. There was the case of the M-3, or General Grant, tank, which was a disgrace. We were mollified by the repeated statements of the commander of the Services of Supply and the Army Chief of Ordnance. The former, General Somervell, said bluntly on March 1, 1943, "We have the best equipment in the world." The latter, General Campbell, followed it up by saying "Our tanks are superior to anything the enemy has." The test has now come, and, till Mr. Baldwin can prove his point, we ourselves are satisfied that the services have lived up to their promises. The Truman Committee ought to explore the problem with a view to reassuring those who may have been disturbed by Mr. Baldwin's conclusions.

Mission to Moscow

Rejoicing over the mission of reconciliation which Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk and some other members of the Polish government at London are engaged upon in Russia must of necessity be tempered by the realization that, on the eve of the arrival in Moscow of the Polish leaders, the Kremlin presented the world with an accomplished fact. That was the de facto recognition accorded the newly created Polish Committee of National Liberation as the governing authority in the liberated portions of Poland.

It is no secret that Premier Mikolajczyk, an enlightened Polish statesman of the type of the late lamented General Sikorski, was prepared to go to Moscow a long time ago in the belief that through personal consultations with Premier Stalin and Foreign Minister Molotov, a Polish-Russian modus vivendi could be worked out. Despite the powerful support given Premier Mikolajczyk's efforts in this regard by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, no invitation to the Polish leaders was forthcoming from the Kremlin until after Russian troops had crossed over into what Moscow itself recognizes as indisputably Polish territory, and, with Moscow's support, the Committee of Liberation had been set up.

It speaks volumes for the statesmanship and realism of Premier Mikolajczyk that this development did not deter him from going to Moscow anyway, once it became clear that his presence in the Soviet capital was welcomed. It can only be hoped that from his conversation with the Russian leaders an arrangement satisfactory both to Russia and to Poland can be worked out. Otherwise the Polish-Russian problem will remain a skeleton at the Allied feast, a reminder that while the United Nations are united in winning the war, they are anything but united as to the ways and means of perpetuating the coming victory.

THEY HAVE CUT DOWN
KILREECHES WOOD

Let's never go back to Kilreeches,
Mist-clad in her morning gown.
The wood with its chestnuts and beeches
No longer broods over the town.
They have filled in the rain-swept gorge,
They've straightened the ragged lanes,
The street of the sunlit panes
Effaced with a factory and forge.
My grief! to behold Kilreeches,
Still clad in her misty gown,
The wood with its chestnuts and beeches
No longer broods over the town.

Watch Argentina

Argentina has at long last been read out of the inter-American family with bell, book and candle. Our State Department this week banished the last doubt about the Argentine dictatorship's treachery by releasing exact details of Argentine aid to the enemy. In an unprecedented statement, the department pointed out that Argentina alone among the American republics deserted the Allied cause and has "openly and notoriously been giving affirmative assistance to the declared enemies of the United Nations."

This scathing indictment was put out to explain our decision not to recognize the Farrell regime until it changes its ways. The Latin-American nations have been consulted at every step and are standing with us on this.

Another Chance

The United States Government has bent over backwards to be patient with Argentina, and in spite of these diplomatic fireworks, apparently this extreme patience is to continue. All inquiries about applying economic sanctions to Argentina have been met with the reply that the time has not yet come to say yes or no on this. What it adds up to is that the convicted traitor nation is to be given another chance.

The Argentines have been quick to see this. Release of the United States indictment was answered by a cry that Argentina has been "misunderstood" from her foreign minister and a chorus from the Buenos Aires press saying that things can still be patched up.

The hemisphere grapevine has reported for days past that Argentina's dictators will do some kind of a whitewash job to get out of their present predicament. One rumor is that former Ambassador Espil will be put into the cabinet as foreign minister to make a show of switching Argentina out of the Axis camp.

The question that arises in the minds of nonofficial observers who have followed the Argentine crisis from day to day is this: Is it not locking the stable door after the horse is stolen to force Argentine to drop the Axis now? Should not Argentina also be required to live up to the spirit of her promises to work with the other New World nations for the internal peace and progress of the hemisphere as well as for its defense?

In other words, are we going to let Argentina get out of her present tight place by ditching the Axis, yet permit her to go on with her avowed program of dominance and even military aggression in southern South America? The Axis has lost the war. Most of the bleeding that Argentina's wartime desertion was to cause has already been done. It is justice to withhold approval of her treachery and right to prevent Argentina from becoming the last refuge of nazism, as it certainly will be if we don't stop it. But shouldn't the American republics also make it a condition of acceptance back into the hemisphere circle that Argentina shall also ditch the program that promises to turn South America into an armed camp?

And can this dictatorship, whatever its promises, ever be trusted either to clean out the Axis entirely or to abandon its ambitions? If we can never trust this regime, are we not throwing good patience after bad in giving them another chance?

Militaristic Action

The question of the Farrell government's militarism is extremely practical and timely. It is sowing fear throughout South America. Chile, once Argentina's companion in noncooperation, has in recent weeks learned with great dismay that Argentina's military preparations include equipment for fighting in the mountains. Chile is the only important country that is divided from Argentina by mountains.

Only a few days ago Argentina made a definite gesture of military intimidation against little Uruguay in sending a group of Argentine officers to plant the Argentine flag for a few hours on a Uruguayan island in the River Plate. This is the exact pattern of early Japanese aggression against China.

Argentina's militarism is not a remote question for the people of this country, but on the contrary affects our practical interests for two important reasons. First, we are counting on postwar development in Latin America to absorb surplus goods, capital and skills that we produce. This will cushion a postwar recession. But if South America's richest countries are plunging toward war, then our hope for an expanded commerce with a developing area will fail.

Second, stability in this hemisphere is absolutely necessary if we are to have a firm position as we attempt to build a world peace. Militarism run riot in South America is absolutely incompatible with such stability.

The United States Government is at present taking a very firm stand toward Argentina. To date it amounts to refusing to appease or backtrack on action already taken. Indications are that a firm policy will be held to until the Axis is rooted out there. It is perhaps too much to ask that an ounce of prevention should be mixed with our pound of cure. This, however, is exactly what the best interest of the United States demands.

The Lines Break

By Barnet Nover

Too Late For Propaganda

AS A PROPAGANDA effort, Dr. Goebbels' radio address to the German people on July 26 was one of the cleverest ever made by that master of lies. Its favorable effect on German morale is not to be discounted. Yet it is doubtful whether it can do more than temporarily stem the tide of discontent, defeatism and demoralization that is spreading in the Reich.

From the Nazi point of view, the only comforting development that has occurred in many a long month was the failure of the attempt made on July 20 to assassinate Adolf Hitler. Not surprisingly, Goebbels played up that escape for all it is worth and a good deal more.

What happened, he said, proves that "the Fuehrer performs his work under the protection of Providence," that "he is in God's hands." "If the salvation of the Fuehrer from extreme danger to his life was no miracle," he added "then there just are no miracles at all."

THE POINT of this blasphemous attempt to identify Providence with the Beast of Berchtesgaden is, of course, to assure the German people that just as Hitler was saved when he was at the very brink of death so Germany will be saved, too, even though the present outlook for the Reich is very dark.

"We will master," said Goebbels, "even the last and the greatest of difficulties . . . The Almighty will never again reveal himself more distinctly to us than in His miraculous salvation of the Fuehrer. He desires that we should continue to earn our victory, so that one day He will be able to hand us the laurels."

Interlarded with these pleas for faith in the Fuehrer and in Germany's ultimate triumph were promises by Goebbels of an increasing flow of German manpower to the fighting fronts and the armaments industries, of new secret weapons, of a speedy turn in the military tide on all fronts and especially the Eastern Front.

BUT THE TIME has clearly passed when the Nazis could win victories through the manipulation of men's minds alone. Nazi propaganda finds a formidable rival in Allied action. The hopes created by Dr. Goebbels are being dissolved on the battlefield.

The day Dr. Goebbels went to the microphone saw the beginning of the latest and by all odds the most formidable Allied offensive in Normandy since the fall of Cherbourg. On that day Narva fell.

The next day the guns of Moscow boomed out five successive salvos in rejoicing over the capture of Lwow, Bialystok, Stanislaw, Dvinsk, Siaulai and Rezeneke. On the following day Brest Litovsk fell into Russian hands and Warsaw heard the guns of the approaching Red army. At the same time, American forces in France broke through the German lines on a wide front and reports from Normandy declared flatly that the German defenses were in a "chaotic" state.

IN VIEW of these developments only the most fanatical among the Nazis will accept Dr. Goebbels' thesis that "the future . . . will be ours."

There can be no doubt that neither Hitler nor Goebbels are bluffing when they declare that "total war is the order of the hour." In their desperation the Nazis will leave no stone unturned in pushing Germany's war production or securing further manpower for the fighting fronts. Nor will they scruple at the employment of any weapon not yet used if through it they can secure additional time.

For this reason we cannot afford to view the outlook with complacence. Yet no good purpose is served by assuming that the German situation is better than it is.

FOR ALL the many differences there are between the Reich's plight today and its plight in midsummer 1918 the similarities are too great to be ignored. In 1918, too, Germany resorted to total mobilization in an effort to secure enough manpower to fill the gaping holes left by four years of war.

Then as now every available able-bodied man in the factories, the railroads, the government offices and elsewhere behind the lines was put in uniform. But these new recruits did not help matters at all. And it is questionable whether similar scrapings from the bottom of the barrel will help Germany today.

Victory in war creates its own momentum. And the momentum of Allied victory in Europe today cannot be halted or reversed by anything Hitler, Goebbels, Himler and Goering can do and even less by anything they can say. The evils that afflict the Reich today cannot be cured by propaganda poultices or verbal salves, by expostulations or by prayers—or even by the weapon which the Nazis have always resorted to in season and out—terror. That, too, is going to fail.

Subsidies In Welfare

Mr. Hodgkins apparently is still troubled by an inability to distinguish between public assistance and those forms of public service designed to assure minimum living standards to the population as a whole. Public assistance, assuring livelihood to people dependent on public aid for survival, is not intended to take the place of the many services now provided through Government to make life more worth while to all people. The logical result of Mr. Hodgkins' argument would mean the transfer of public health clinics, public recreation, day-care centers and school lunches (to name but a few of the governmental programs primarily benefiting low-income groups) to public assistance administration.

The subsidy element in public housing would appear to me to be distinguished from public assistance by the fact that its primary function is to increase the supply of housing available to low-income groups and thereby place a floor under the housing standards of the entire population. Limiting eligibility to low-income families serves the primary purpose of safeguarding private housing interests from public competition with respect to those income groups it is prepared to serve. It does not change the basic purpose of the subsidy, which is tied to the function of providing housing rather than aiding an individual who has been obliged to turn to public assistance when all other resources have failed.

To take a related case, the existence of publicly subsidized day-care centers has not destroyed the private nursery schools and no one has suggested that welfare grants be made to working mothers to enable them to send their children to private schools. Just as in the case of housing, this would in no way serve to remedy the primary problem, inadequacy of suitable facilities, and would at the same time subvert the purpose for which welfare funds are appropriated.

Opening Libraries

In The Post of July 26 I note a letter about Sunday opening of libraries.

The policy of the Public Library in recent years has been to open the Central Library at 8th and K sts. and its two largest branches for four hours on Sunday for reference and circulation of adult books. It was not feasible to maintain Sunday service this summer, but it will be resumed September 17.

Nazi Machinations

Of the Nazis' many talents in the ways of war, not the least diabolical in their talent to confuse or baffle (as circumstances dictate) friend and foe alike.

As a result of the recent well-publicized attempt on Hitler's life and the subsequent German diatribes against a "small clique" of officers who were allegedly prepared to deal with the enemy, it is now generally assumed that a serious revolt among Junker generals has at last caught up with the Nazi war machine. Perhaps so. But why do the Nazis amplify it and advertise it to the world in the midst of the greatest crisis in German history?

Can it be that Hitler, who has identified himself so completely with the German army's "triumphs" earlier in the war, now seeks to shake off responsibility for its disaster on all fronts? You may recall that General Dittmar, military messenger boy for Propaganda Minister Goebbels, started things off by admitting errors in strategy and tactics in the war with Russia and indicating that the front in the East must be shortened. World reaction was one of surprise. Could it be that the man with the carefully cultivated "intuition" was now ready to accept responsibility for his military blunders?

Perhaps the German people and their brothers in chains throughout Europe were "pondering" the Fuehrer's tactical mistakes when the carefully planted bomb shook Hitler out of his silence to blow the blame of Germany's reverses back into the faces of the Junker generals who may have been as much surprised by the dramatic and overemphasized scenes as the rest of humanity. . .

Taking Prisoners

The writer has received this statement in a letter from his son in the Normandy fighting:

"Prisoners are always a morale builder for us. They are just as scared as any of us, and most seem to be tickled to death when they find out that we are not going to kill them. It is my honest opinion that 50 per cent of them keep fighting for two reasons. Their officers force them into the fight and tell them that the Americans will shoot or torture them when they're captured."

In view of this statement, would it not be well for the Allies to make a business of dropping leaflets over the German armies telling them of the good treatment we accord the prisoners we take if they have not already done so? In the long run it might save many thousands of American lives.

Junkers' Revolt

By Paul Winkler

Distrust Generals

Whatever the real story may be behind the conflicting reports of an officers' revolt in Germany, citizens of the United Nations should beware against taking sides mentally, for that might end in arousing sympathy in them for the officers "opposing" Hitler.

Initial reactions to the news, both in the United States and England, were sound. It is true that the public had been forewarned. Again and again we have been told that there is no difference between the Nazis and the Reichswehr, so far as aggressive aims are concerned. We have been warned also that the day would come when the Junker-controlled officers would realize that Germany could not win the war, and would try, by sacrificing a Hitler who would then have outlived his usefulness, to gain credit in the eyes of the Allies and thereby win for themselves the right to organize postwar Germany—for World War III.

But the conflict in Germany may continue for some time; and there is likely to be a tendency among those who watch the tug-of-war between the Nazis and the Reichswehr to identify themselves with one side or the other, to hope that one or the other will come out ahead, forgetting that both camps are equally noxious. From our point of view, it is less important who wins than that the fight is going on. However it comes out, Germany can gain no advantage from an internecine struggle between her one political party and her army.

Both Sides to Blame

There will, of course, be definite advantages to us if Hitler is overthrown, but that is now inevitable, and it makes much less difference to us if the process is a short one or a long one than it does to Germany. If, to speed the end, we should allow ourselves to do exactly what the generals want us to do, side with them against Hitler, we would risk being cheated out of our victory. For in the process, we would be apt to forget that the generals and the Junkers behind them were among those responsible for Hitler's coming to power, and that in many respects they were even more to blame than he for the aggressions committed by Germany. Hitler was in the forefront of the battle, so it is natural to think of him as the greatest enemy of all. But is he, in fact, more dangerous than those who put him in his commanding position and who, if they are allowed to remain in power, will put someone else in it, and for the same reasons?

Even now, some of the news which is alleged to get out of German-occupied territory seems to have the earmarks of carefully designed propaganda, aimed at persuading the Allies to take sides—and thus be led into indulgence for those with whom they feel sympathy. Take, for instance, the reports which somehow "seeped" into London, that an unidentified general, supposed to have been attached to the staff of Field Marshal General Karl von Rundstedt, was killed by the Gestapo when he dared to investigate the massacre of the population of the French village of Oradour-sur-Glane. The impression given by this vague report is that the army is opposed to such atrocities, but cannot prevent them because of the power of the Gestapo.

Army vs. Gestapo

The story went even further. It alleged that Von Rundstedt had sent an ultimatum to Hitler as a result of this case, demanding that his command be extended to cover the Gestapo as well as the army. Since he is reported, unconfirmedly, to have been killed, the implication appears that his death may have been the result of this anti-Gestapo attitude. Thus the army is shown in opposition to the universally hated Gestapo.

Another suggestion which has appeared in the press is that the army revolt against Hitler was caused by resentment against the elevation of Himmler to a post of supreme command over the Reichswehr officers. The probability is that cause and effect have here been reversed. Himmler's appointment seems most likely to have been the result of the generals' attempt to organize a "revolt" to gain better peace terms. His secret services, which penetrate even into the highest ranks of the army, no doubt told him what was brewing. His new position came after the inception of the revolt, not before it.

If the "generals' revolt" had succeeded at once, it would no doubt have been received with skepticism by the Allies. Let them maintain their wariness in the days to come. There is psychological danger in the present indecisive situation and there will be further danger if Hitler succeeds in nipping this revolt in the bud. For as reports come through of Nazi repressive actions against the generals, against the Junkers, against the Schachts and the Von Neuraths, it will be only human, since we have already identified the Nazis with the devils, to identify their victims with the angels. That would be a bad error. There are two sets of devils struggling now to see which of them shall manage the hell they have made for themselves in Germany. Let them fight it out together in the pit.

State May Draft Rehiring Code For Veterans

Annapolis, Md., July 28 (AP).—Governor O'Conor announced today he had referred to Attorney General William C. Walsh a request from Maryland Selective Service headquarters for clarification of statutes governing job reinstatement of returned veterans.

Capt. W. H. Price, USMCR, of the personnel section, had written the Governor asking correct procedures in specific instances and suggesting that Maryland legal authorities prepare a code for the guidance of the State and municipalities in unravelling complications which had arisen or might occur in veteran reemployment.

Case Is Advanced

Price cited the case of Raymond S. Smack of Worcester County, a former State Roads Commission employe, who returned from service to find that his co-workers had been upgraded. Draft headquarters asked if the veteran were entitled to a comparable promotion with increased salary.

Some other questions asked:

Should workers hired under the merit system to replace men in the armed forces be discharged when their predecessors return and if so, should they be discharged according to seniority in their departments or to seniority in the State service?

Is a veteran entitled to his former job if he had been replaced and a position of like seniority, status and pay were available?

Other Questions

If his position had been abolished in his absence, is he entitled to reemployment in a job of similar status even if that might require discharging a nonveteran?

If reemployment is delayed, is the veteran entitled to pay from the date he files a reinstatement application?

If a veteran was discharged at his own request, do his reemployment rights apply?

O'Conor Asks Further Quiz In Gas Theft

Annapolis, Md., July 28 (AP).—A request of the State of West Virginia for the extradition of an Edgewood Heights (Md.) man on a charge of larceny of 2300 gallons of gasoline was held in abeyance today by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, who also refused similar requisition for another Maryland citizen and suggested further investigation of the case.

Asserting that his impression of the case at the conclusion of a two-day hearing was that "the whole story had not been told," the Governor denied extradition of August Z. Little of Harford County, and held in abeyance the request for the requisition of Otho Hawk of Edgewood Heights.

Hawk had testified that his participation in the procurement of the gasoline had been authorized by the commanding officer of the ordnance assembly plant at Edgewood arsenal, who had ordered him to transport the fuel to the post from West Virginia.

The officer, identified as Col. J. A. Rogers, jr., denied, howeve, that he had odeed the civilian employe to fill an Amy tank tuck with the unefined "dip" gasoline presumably for use at the Army post.

O'Conor said he "could find no reason whatsoever" for delivering Little to the West Virginia authorities who charged the two men with theft of the gasoline from the Columbian Carbon Co's gas well drilling near ripley, Jackson County, W. Va.

Declaring that the case demanded further investigation, the governor said that he was unwilling to send out of the State a man "who stands accused in a case which, at this time, is incomplete."

O'Conor declared that it was significant that although almost eight weks had elapsed since notice of the theft came to the authorities, "no disciplinary action had been taken either against Hawk for unauthorized use of the Army vehicles or against a warrant officer attached to the colonel's staff."

The warrant officer, with the colonel's wife, were described by witnesses as having made hurried efforts to sell or store the gasoline outside the Army reservation shortly after it had arrived at Edgewood Arsenal and had been placed upner the direction of the colonel.

"These assertions are not only undenied but are confirmed by investigation of the Maryland State police and the Army intelligence," O'Conor said.

"Suspicious circumstances, to say the least, are clearly observed. ncriminating testimony has been adduced and I think it would be most unfortunate if the case is closed up at this juncture," the Governor declared, adding that other persons than the two subordinate civilian emplyoes are under suspicion."

Maryland Tobacco

Upper Marlboro, Md., July 28 (AP).—Prices for tobacco were generally steady in southern Maryland markets this week, Farm Food Administration officials reported today.

Although slight fluctuation occurred in individual grades, averages varied only $1 to $2 per 100 pounds from last week.

Tips and nondescript types were slightly stronger and all better grades held firm at $62 per 100 pounds.

A high percentage of extremely common tobacco was offered, forcing the general average price down to $42.46 per 100 pounds—a decline of 82 cents from last week.

Net first-hand sales for the week amounted to 1,667,026 pounds, bringing the net total to 12,476,972 pounds at an average of $46.84.

During this season 1,807,854 pounds have been resold, circulating from market to market.

A total of 2,500,000 pounds of tobacco was received on Baltimore markets. This, with auction sales, represented approximately 70 per cent of the estimated crop production.

Average prices per 100 pounds based on representative U. S. grades, as compared with the week ended July 21:

Heavy crop—Fair light red, $62, unchanged; fair dark red, $60, unchanged; low dark red, $48, unchanged; low green, $20.50, unchanged.

Tips—Fair dark red, $58, up $2; low green, $20.75, down 25 cents.

Thin crop—Good light red, $62, unchanged; good dark red, $62, unchanged.

Bumper Peach Crop Forecast In Crozet Area

Waynesboro, Va., July 28 (AP).—A bumper crop of peaches, both in the Crozet area and the Waynesboro area, is forecast by most growers and brokers. Notwithstanding lack of rain, there is every promise of a heavy yield, though rain will help in filling out the fruit and lack of it may delay picking.

Early peaches are being picked and harvested now but the later peach is the main crop and this will not be ready, under normal circumstances, until between August 10 and 15.

In Augusta the hope of peach growers—and apple growers, too—insofar as picking and packing goes, lies in the prisoner of war camp scheduled for Lyndhurst, teen-age labor, and women, and a scattering of regular pickers yet remaining in the area.

Nelson County is relying heavily on the Woman's Land Army unit to be established on the Thomas fortune Ryan estate south of Lovingston and western Albemarle is looking forward to aid of 400 Bahamians who will be encamped near Crozet for the season.

Member of 'Faith' Sect Suffering From Snake Bite

St. Charles, Va., July 28 (AP).—The first known instance this season of a member of the Holiness Faith Healers sect suffering reaction to the faith demonstrations in which members allow snakes to bite them, occurred last night.

Macil Thompson, a member, was bitten on the hand by a large copperhead snake which was captured in the nearby mountains and brought to Stone Creek for use in the sect's ritual.

Nine copperheads and rattlesnakes have been used during the summer demonstrations with no mishap until last night, although six of the sect members have died in recent years from the snake bites.

Thompson's hand swelled and became discolored, as the snake's poison became effective. He is a mine employe.

Roy E. Davy, president of Local 26, United Rubber Workers of America, said, in announcing the agreement to resume work, that he hoped a full crew would be on the job on the 11 o'clock shift tonight.

The stoppage started when 40 workers left their jobs to protest disciplinary action taken by the company against one of their members. The employe was suspended for one week. The sympathy strike of his fellow workers followed.

$150,000 Fire Hits Pulaski, Razes Church

Pulaski, Va., July 28 (AP).—Fire swept through the Virginia Oak Flooring Plant, the Pentacostal Holiness Church and three residences here yesterday afternoon leaving an estimated $150,000 amount of damage in its wake before it was controlled.

The blaze, which developed into Pulaski's worst fire since 1909, originated in a motor on a sander in the flooring plant. W. F. White, owner, estimated his loss at $125,000 and said some of the damage was covered by insurance. The firm, engaged 100 per cent in war work and employing 100 men, lost all machines and finished materials. An estimated 125,000 feet of lumber was destroyed.

The fire was being controlled by employes until their hose line was burned apart by flying sparks. High winds shifted the course of the flames which soon threatened small business houses and homes. Local merchants closed their stores to permit employes to assist firemen and remove furniture from houses in the path of the flames.

The Holiness Church was reported to be a total loss. The Rev. J. M. Daugherty, pastor, estimated the loss to be $10,000.

Residences damaged by the fire belonged to the Rev. W. E. Rogers, Tom Kegley and B. M. Payne.

James King, a Pulaski fireman, was temporarily blinded by flying cinders, and two other firemen, Richard Taylor and Bill Callahan, were taken to the hospital when overcome by heat and smoke. Their conditions were not considered serious.

Army Methods Of Meatcutting Demonstrated

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 28 (AP).—Don P. Tyler, of Chicago, demonstrating Army meat cutting methods today for civilian food consultants meeting at Fort George G. Meade declared that the cleaver, "as a meat cutting tool is strictly outdated."

Tyler, founder of the unofficial Society for the Prevention of Hash, and also president of the National Livestock and Meat Board, wore no apron, but did not spot his dapper business suit.

"The cleaver," he said, "is an effective instrument for driving nails, cracking ice and opening cans."

Addressing hotelmen from 12 Eastern States and the District of Columbia, Tyler said that the Army meat-cutting methods he used were two to three years ahead of the latest hotel and restaurant practices.

Claiming there was no such thing as a "tough" piece of meat, but only "less tender" and "less tender yet" cuts, Tyler said there "are ways of getting cube steaks, pot roasts and other portions from places where they are not ordinarily found."

He added that by proper preparation, lamb could be made to taste like beef and lamb stew could be made palatable.

"As a matter of fact the best thing we can do with lamb is make it taste like beef," he remarked.

Separate meetings were conducted for food men and bakery men, and Maj. W. E. Murphy told the bakery officials that in two and one-half years there "has not been a single complaint against the taste and nutritive value of Army bread."

John T. McCarthy, of Washington, American Bakers Association president, presided at the bakery session.

Va. Woman Appeals Slaying Conviction

Richmond, Va., July 28 (AP).—A Henrico County Circuit Court jury yesterday found Mrs. Hester J. Hord of Richmond guilty of manslaughter in the shooting of George Errow Scoggins, 48, of Highland Springs, May 24, and her sentence was fixed at 3 years in the penitentiary.

Attorney for the 45-year-old defendant immediately moved to have the verdict set aside as contrary to law and evidence, and Judge Julien Gunn set a hearing on the motion for 10 a. m. August 10. Mrs. Hord's bond of $3000 was continued.

Mrs. Hord claimed self-defense in the shooting. She testified that Scoggins was shot as the pair struggled for possession of a .22-caliber revolver following an argument.

Area Dairymen Seek Increased U. S. Subsidies

By the Associated Press

Increased Federal subsidies on milk and butter fat as a means of relieving conditions resulting from continued drought were sought yesterday by Maryland and Virginia agricultural leaders, Dr. T. B. Symons, chairman of the Statewide drought committee, reported.

The director of the University of Maryland extension service headed the two-State delegation which also sought the inauguration of a subsidy plan for importation of hay and grains from other areas for dairy and beef cattle and work horses.

The requests were placed with J. B. Hutson, president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Hutson was informed by the agriculturalists that Maryland and Virginia dairymen had been forced to feed cattle hay that had been reserved for consumption this fall and winter and that milk production was falling rapidly.

Under the proposed increased milk and butter fat subsidy the summer rates of 45 cents per hundred-weight on milk and 6 cents per pound on butterfat would be raised to the winter rates of 70 cents for milk and 10 cents for cream, Dr. Symons reported.

New Hospital Set For Frederick Or Hagerstown

Cumberland, Md., July 28 (AP).—Dr. R. H. Riley, State health department director, indicated today that either Frederick or Hagerstown would be the site for the proposed Western Shore Chronic Disease Hospital.

At the same time, he said that the State board of health had not included Cumberland in the possible location because that city was too far removed from the central location being sought for such an institution.

Persons with chronic disease in the eastern district of the State are treated at the Salisbury Hospital, Dr. Riley said, and there is a great need for another hospital for the western district of the State. After the war it also is proposed to construct a new State hospital on the Eastern Shore.

Meetings Set To Clarify New Food Ceilings

Baltimore, July 28 (AP).—A series of meetings will be held throughout Maryland beginning Monday to explain requirements of the new Office of Price Administration restaurant regulations which go into effect July 31.

Harry Yingling, State OPA price specialist, will speak at each of the meetings which have been called by the local war price rationing boards.

Itinerary Listed

The cities and meeting dates will include: Baltimore, July 31; Cumberland, August 2; Hagerstown, August 3; Frederick, August 3; Annapolis, August 7; Hyattsville, August 8; Cambridge, August 9; Salisbury, August 9, and Ocean City, August 10.

Restaurant owners are required by the new regulations to post their ceiling prices for 40 specified food items. The list of foods to be so priced will be released August 7, the OPA officials said.

The local boards will furnish posters for the items which must be put up by August 16.

Absentees Checked

Meanwhile, State OPA Director Leo H. McCormick announced today further steps in a plan to curb the possible misuse of gasoline rations.

In a letter to all plant transportation committees in Maryland, McCormick called on them to submit to their local boards a record of the number of days each applicant for a supplemental ration was absent from employment, due to sickness, vacations, leaves of absence or any other reasons.

Upon receipt of this information the local boards will extend the ealiest renewal date of the rations accordingly, not to exceed the number of days absent.

Newport News Malaria Peril To Be Studied

Richmond, Va., July 28 (AP).—The possibilit yof malarial infection in the area adjacent to the recently damned waters of the Chickahominy River will come up for discussion tomorrow at a conference in the Governor's office.

The conference, initiated by Newport News authorities, will be participated in by Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, and representatives of the Federal Works Administration.

Dr. Riggin told the Governor's budget commission last fall that the danger of malarial infection in this section is very real because most of the mosquitoes are of the malaria-bearing type.

There is little, if any, malaria in this section now, but many soldiers returning from overseas assignments have been infected.

The State provided a small fund for experimental work with mosquito control, but what steps will be taken will not be determined until after the conference.

Twister Hits Essex, Blows Out Windows

Essex, Md., July 28 (AP).—A thunder gust, described by police as a twister, struck Essex last night, blew out windows, ripped off roofs and left part of this area in darkness for more than an hour.

Residents of Hyde Park reported that the twister, blowing from the northwest, came off the water with no warning except a few unusually sharp flashes of lightning.

Joseph Bily, assistant meterologist at the Baltimore Weather Bureau office, reported that the twister was an extremely localized disturbance and it is the suddeness of such blows, rather than the high velocity, that does the damage.

ASF's 54-Hour Work Schedules Out Today

That extra hour that Army Service Forces employes must work each day starting Tuesday will be added on in the mornings, in most cases. Today the employes will be given the new 54-hour working schedules. War Department officials yesterday completed arrangements with the Capital Transit Co. and the Virginia bus lines to render additional service to ease the burdens of its employes. The department offered to furnish drivers for some of the busses but this couldn't be worked out as the Capital Transit Co. requires that its drivers must go through a school before they are permitted to take a bus on the streets and there just isn't time. Bus officials admit that the new schedules will be "pretty thin" but they promise to do their best.

PENTAGON STORY: Several grass-rooters were wild-eyed on a tour through the massive Pentagon Building. One of them approached a guard on the way out to ask:

"Tell me," she said, "for whom was this building named?"

The guard, in all seriousness, replied: "Why, don't you know? General Pentagon."

Commented the equally serious grass-rooter: "General Pentagon—he must have been an awfully big man."

DELAYED PAYDAYS will be inaugurated at Federal Works Agency next month. They'll be delayed gradually and by December the entire office will be on an eight-day lag. Employes will get their checks on August 9 for the July 24 to August 8 pay period and for the seven pay periods thereafter the payday will be delayed a day until November 23, which will become a regular payday along with the eighth of each month . . . Treasury Department also is studying a delayed payday for its employes, as are half a dozen other agencies. Officials say that most of the extra work of recomputing payrolls and making out supplemental checks will be eliminated by the lag between the time when the pay period ends and the time employes are paid.

DRASTIC CHANGES in the administration of efficiency ratings have been recommended to the Civil Service Commission by the War Production Board rating committee whose members are T. G. Maynard, chairman; N. R. Adelson, and Lura Bradfield. Briefly, this committee believes that it is not now possible to achieve the true intent of Congress when it ordered the ratings. "It is unreasonable to assume," it told the commission, "that only 17 of the 9000 WPB employes are 'unsatisfactory' and only 140 whose performance is 'fair,' while 82 per cent of the employes are outstanding." First, it's suggested that ratings be administered by a permanent staff rather than a rating units—of 100 employes each—be set up under the staff.

THAT ANY TYPE of productive activity must be measured and rated uniformily . . . that a simple, objective method of rating must be provided . . . an independent check on the validity of ratings and an adequate means for the correction of inequalities. The committee suggested a revised form to rate operational, production and processing employes along five lines—skill, application, accuracy, production and personality characteristics. Planners, administrators and supervisors would be rated as to their effectiveness, supervision and personality and they would be given points on each of these characteristics. There's no question that the efficiency rating system needs to be overhauled to make it more uniform between departments. The Library of Congress recently submitted a reform plan.

TALKING ABOUT EXTRA hours of work, it's interesting to compare the hours of the United States civil servants with their colleagues in Canada. In peacetime, United States employes were on a 5½-day, 39-hour work week, and this was lifted to 48 hours generally after we went to war. A few agencies work some of their employes 60 hours regularly, and now Army Service Forces will put their employes on a 54-hour week. In Canada, however, the peacetime work for government employes was 5 days, 36½ hours, and when that country went to war the hours were lifted to 41½ hours and there they have stayed. And this should be downright amusing to Federal workers who have been put in the 54-hour week. Many Canadians civil servants believe they are maltreated because they must work 41½ hours a week.

Huh?
Yes.
Nonsense... Is it stuck? ... Can't you pull it in? I put a good strong cord on it—
Barnaby's Fairy Godfather took the cord off—
Barnaby... Jane... I won't believe a story like that—
That's what the Leprechaun said.
He said you wouldn't believe us... But will you come and—

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

That Gun Is Loaded

THE CHARACTER of the Argentine dictatorship ceased to be a purely Argentine affair when Colonel Peron, on June 10, committed his government "to the total mobilization of the country," and called upon "all the best minds of the nation . . . to know war, to study and understand it, as the only way of reaching a complete solution of the problem that may be presented to us, and which we shall have to resolve if some day God should decide that the clarion call of war must resound on the banks of the River Plate." A dictatorship preparing for total war is not a neutral state, and its neighbors would be guilty of criminal negligence if they failed to take all necessary measures to stop the development of this new aggressive state before it can become formidable.

LIPPMANN

There is no doubt whatever that the Argentine dictatorship intends external aggression. Our government and the other American republics have conclusive evidence that the Bolivian government was overthrown last winter by a conspiracy fomented in Argentina. As Secretary Hull said at the time, the Bolivian aggression was "but one act committed by a general subversive movement having for its purpose steadily expanding activities on the continent." The countries immediately threatened by the Argentine fascists are its immediate neighbors, Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia, and Chile. This general subversive movement is now to be backed by a military machine mobilized for total war.

BY WORLD standards, Argentina is, obviously, not capable of becoming a great military power. But in South America, as compared with her smaller near neighbors, she already has great military superiority, and can easily make it absolute. Thus the issue of collective security is posed now in practical form within the Western Hemisphere. We havein our midst a state intent on aggression, organizing for aggression, and capable of aggression. If we accept this situation, if we do not organize the collective defense of our threatened neighbors, if we appease the Argentine dictatorship, the solidarity of the American republics is destroyed, and all our plans and promises for an organized peace in the world will have become a mockery before we have even begun to write them down on paper.

It will be to the everlasting credit of Secretary Hull that he has seen the gravity of the issue. Though he has moved with the utmost forbearance, with scrupulous respect for the views and wishes of our sister republics and of our other allies, he has not paltered with the issue nor flinched. We have a right to believe that all the United Nations will recognize that there is at stake here no special and exclusive interest of the United States, nor even only the peace and solidarity of Pan-America, but the prospect of international law and order in the postwar world. If the American republics cannot throttle aggression in their own neighborhood, they will have disqualified themselves everywhere as guardians of the peace.

THIS IS, of course, an inconvenient moment to have to meet this issue. But let us not deceive ourselves: The disturbers of the peace will always pick a moment when it is inconvenient for the guardians of the peace to act. The Japanese when they raped Manchuria, the Italian Fascists in Abyssinia and in Spain, the Nazis in the Rhineland, Austria and Czechoslovakia were always picking inconvenient moments when the other nations were preoccupied. It is an essential part of the technique of aggression to act when the guardians of peace are off guard.

The Argentina dictators are counting on our preoccupation with the great war, on British, American, and Russian need for their exports, and upon exploiting the economic tensions in neighboring countries which are the consequence of the war. They believe that their position is strong enough to insure them against effective countermeasures while the great war continues, that when it ends the world's need of their supplies will, in combination with a general war-weariness, guarantee them immunity for long enough to permit them to organize their military force and to infiltrate their neighbors. They hope then that the postwar world will be so unsettled that they will be able to fish in its troubled waters.

THEY THINK they have us in a cleft stick. But they will be mistaken unless, as is now no longer in the least probable, we flinch. The United States, in concert with our neighbors, is quite capable, without subtracting anything that will be missed from its armed forces in the war, of reinforcing decisively and promptly the threatened states. The knowledge that this is so, and the assurance that we are prepared to act if called upon, already exist, except perhaps in the headquarters of the dictatorship.

This should be understood there in Buenos Aires in considering the significance of the diplomatic isolation which the American republics, supported by Great Britain, have imposed. For the effectiveness of mild measures, such as non-recognition, is directly proportionate to the certainty that much stronger measures are available if necessary. In fact the success of mild measures depends upon a clear understanding that they can be the forerunners of decisive measures.

NOR SHOULD there be any illusory hope in Buenos Aires that the United Nations can be blackmailed because they need Argentine exports. The United Nations need to buy the exports. But the Argentine people need to sell them, and if the dictatorship sought to raise the question of who could stand an interruption of this trade the longest, we who buy their supplies or Argentina which sells them, they will find that war has toughened the spirit of the Allies and increased enormously their resourcefulness. The Argentine dictatorship cannot overawe or blackmail the great coalition which has already conquered the Italian dictatorship, and is well on its way to conquering the Nazi and Japanese.

Let the Argentine government understand these things, and be fully aware that as Fascist aggressors they are not going to be apepased, and the way will begin to open up without violence to the restoration of order and solidarity.

THE WIRES HAVE BEEN HOT these past 24 hours with the announcement that the motion picture rights to "Voice of the Turtle" have been purchased by Warner Brothers at "the highest price ever paid for a Broadway play."

MARGREAT SULLAVAN

It is understood that this stratospheric figure rounds itself out at something like $500,000, plus other cash considerations to be paid over a 5-year period. These would include a cut of the box-office "take" over a certain sum, which, it is estimated by the sharks at such things, might roll the over-all price up to an approximate million.

The John van Druten comedy, seen here only at last January's "command performance" with the original cast of Margaret Sullavan, Elliott Nugent and Audrey Christie, first was put on the market as a "package" deal that included all future rights—television, screen, radio and whatever—and bore the modest price tag of three million smackers.

This is not the deal consummated by the Warner Brothers. They have purchased only the motion picture rights.

It is being bruited about, however, that Margaret Sullavan's appearance in the film in the same role she created on the stage was one of the stipulations written into the paper signed by Jack L. Warner and Producer Alfred de Liagre, jr.

No harm would have been done if it had also included Mr. Nugent and Miss Christie. On the tick of the second I can think of no better casting.

Just a reminder that tonight is the night of the Stage Door Canteen's bond rally on the south steps of the Treasury Department and that $100 "E" war bonds and accompanying free tickets still are procurable at the Treasury Department's 15th st. entrance, its authorized issuing agency at 612 14th st., or at any downtown motion picture theater that is an authorized agent—meaning any one you come to. An elaborate program, emcee'd by Helen Hayes, will include personal appearances of Jennifer Jones, star of the film version of "The Song of Bernadette"—now being presented for the first time in stage form at Catholic University—Anita Colby, Lucille Manners, the U. S. Navy Dance Orchestra and the WAC Band from the New York Port of Embarkation.

In addition to her screen work, Jennifer Jones is contributing to the war effort by serving as a Nurses' Aide in California. Pursuant to those duties, she will be present in uniform at the Red Cross Blood Donors Center this morning from 9:30 a. m., accompanied by Miss Colby, and later will visit the amputation ward at Walter Reed Hospital to perk up the boys' morale as a preliminary to the Canteen bond show. Tomorrow, Camp Lee, as I understand it, and then back to Washington. In between times—if there are any in between times—she and Miss Colby are participating in all manner of Army, Treasury and other official enterprises. One even doubts that Miss Jones will get out to C. U., to see Betsy Ross in a beautiful performance of the role that won her the 1943 Academy Award as the best screen actress of the year.

Another New One

Anyone digging into the matter a bit at this point probably would turn up the fact that the Kogod-Burka Amusement Co. has a new motion picture theater up its neighborhood sleeve.

Don't know what they plan to call it, but the new house will rear itself at 2834 Alabama ave. se., at an approximate cost of $115,000.

Designed by John J. Zink, well-known Baltimore theater architect, who has a considerable list of representative film houses already to his credit in Washington—the old Rialto was his first—the new theater will be erected by the Cladny Construction Co.

For further information, consult your own crystal ball.

Director Kirk Brown of the Willard Roof Players has discovered that he has a few male speaking parts open for the Music Hall's forthcoming production of "After Dark." Those desiring to enroll in the scramble for them should present themselves to Mr. Brown on the tenth floor of the Willard tonight between the hours of 7 and 8 o'clock, when auditions will be run off. Those with a yen to sing as well as act should bring their voices and their own music along.

The perpetually personable Miss Jean Dalrymple, who seems suddenly to have turned theatrical producer as well as publicist, breaks out the news that come the end of his present screen assignment—a film fantasy for Cary Grant—Marc Connelly will come East to direct "Hope for the Best," the William McCleary comedy she will present in the early fall. Famous playwright, producer and author of "The Green Pastures," Mr. Connelly expanded his activities last winter to include the perter's production of Thornton formance of the role of the Narrator in the New York City Cen-Wilder's "Our Town." It would be a reluctant suggestion that Mr. McCleary called his comedy "Hope for the Best" because Mr. Connelly will only direct it!

"Gorgeous-Hunk-of-Man" Note

That "Tars and Spars" revue, coming along soon to the Capitol, may be written down in advance as a very Mature stage show!

Broken Neck Fatal To Md. Swimmer

Riviera Beach, Md., July 28 (AP). William P. Tiedemann, 22, brother of Albert Tiedemann, Baltimore Oriole infielder now in the Army, was killed last night while swimming near Riviera Beach.

Tiedemann, his companions reported was diving from a boat into deep water when high winds swung the boat around and he plunged into shallow water.

The Baltimore County medical examiner later said he had died from a broken neck.

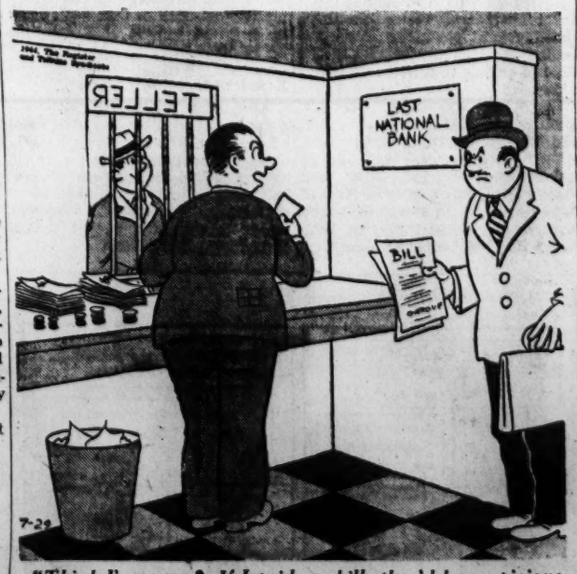
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Off the Record

By Ed Reed



"Think I'm crazy? If I paid my bills they'd be suspicious of me around here!"

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

New York, July 28.

ART: A short, high-voiced man attended an art exhibit, and stopped to study a surrealistic painting. "What is it?" he asked. . . . "I'll tell you what it is," another man volunteered. "It's a picture showing the different stages of a rose unfolding. It's going to hang in the Municipal Airport." . . . "Oh no it won't," the short man stated . . . "Oh yes it will," the other insisted. "I'm the artist who painted it." "Oh no it won't," the short man assured him. "Because I'm the Mayor of the City of New York."

CLARE BOOTHE LUCE

GLORY: The impression somehow has spread that Quentin Reynolds was paid for making his speech at the Democratic Convention. He was paid nothing. He didn't even ask for, nor did he receive expense money. . . . In order to make the Chicago broadcast, Reynolds had to cancel two scheduled radio appearances, for which he was to have been paid $1500. He had to forego writing a Collier's article, at $2000. The fares, hotel rooms, etc., for himself and his wife cost $500. And he'll have to spend $100 for two additional secretaries to answer 2000 letters about his speech. Total cost of speech, to Reynolds, $4100.

FASHION: John LaTouche, the songwriter, recently received his discharge from the Seabees. He soon will enter the Army. He didn't want to buy any clothes for the short period during which he'll be a civilian. He, therefore, had his tailor make for him a green zipper suit, the kind which Churchill wore in Moscow and Washington . . . LaTouche entered the Stork Club, where he was stopped and was told: "You must wear a jacket, sir" . . . "But, there's no jacket to this uniform," he replied . . . "Oh, a uniform?" asked the doorman. "Of what country?" . . . "Ruritania," said La Touche, entering freely. 'The Ruritanian Air Force."

CHANCE: "Pig" is the name of the dice-game now popular in Washington. It's played with one die. A player rolls the die, and continues to roll it, adding the numbers turned up at each roll— unless he rolls a One, in which case whatever score he made during his roll is canceled. He may stop and pass the die to his opponent whenever he wishes—for example, after he's rolled a total of 18 points and thinks he's about due to roll the nullifying One. These 18 points then are credited to him. The first player to roll 100 points wins.

HONESTY: Chico Marx watched a producer playing bridge in a gambling house at Las Vegas. The producer lost $800. Chico, who is an expert card player, took the producer aside and informed him: "You've been playing with crooks. Those cigars they are smoking were used for the purpose of signaling bids to each other. I wouldn't pay off, if I were you" . . . "Well, I played and I lost, so I'll pay," the producer decided, and paid the $800 . . . The next day the producer returned to the same gambling room. And at the bridge table, playing with the same cigar-smoking trio, was Chico Marx.

CHATTER: Floyd Odlum may become the chief fund-raiser for the Democratic National Committee . . . The radio chains are bidding for "John Henry," the famed character created by Roark Bradford. Canada Lee is the actor expected to play the role . . . Carl Van Doren is at the Presbyterian Hospital . . . For the first three days of the Democratic convention, Edward P. Flynn, the New York Post's city editor, received mail addressed to Edward J. Flynn, the political leader. All these letters were delivered, unopened, to the politician, who read them and said: "He might as well have opened them. All they wanted were jobs."

MISTAKE: When Representative Clare Boothe Luce visited Governor Dewey at Albany, she saw a reporter outside the executive of fices. She knew that she had met him before. "Hello, Jack," Mrs. Luce greeted him cheerily . . . "The name isn't Jack, it's Dick," replied the reporter glumly . . . "Oh, that's right," said Mrs. Luce. "Excuse me, Mr. Doyle" . . . "It's not Doyle," said the Daily News' veteran political writer, "it's Lee."

RIVALRY: Croswell Bowen, the cameraman who was wounded in Africa, is NBC's foreign news monitor, listening to the competing short-wave broadcasts from London and Berlin, each citing different figures on planes-shot-down, etc. . . . One morning last week Bowen heard BBC report: "A beautiful 19-year-old French girl recently harbored a paratrooper, took him through secret by-paths into the Allied lines and together they were able to give British security officers information about Nazi installations. Then she led a British patrol back into German lines and many demolitions were accomplished" . . . Berlin Radio, not to be outdone, reported the next day: "A beautiful French girl led a British tank column into ambush where it was completely annihilated. This beautiful brave French girl was loyal to her country" . . . The competition ended there. Neither Berlin nor London is producing any more loyal girls.

COURAGE: Catherine Searles, the tragic young lady whose right arm was bitten off by the polar bear at Central Park Zoo, is coming through her gruesome ordeal bravely. To a hospital visitor yesterday she said, smilingly: "I'm lucky at that. I write and play tennis with my left hand."

BUSINESS: Bill Perlberg, producer of "Song of Bernadette," was in the Stork Club with Burns and Allen, with whom he discussed plagiarism suits. "To avoid such suits," he said, "I won't buy a plot which is told to me by the author. I insist that he submit it in writing." He told of Norman Krasna trying to tell him the plot of a story. "I won't listen to it. Write it down," Perlman warned him. Krasna went to Jack Warner, told him the plot, and Warner bought it . . . The story was the big money-maker, "Princess O'Rourke."

Nats Drop 7th Straight as Chisox Win, 8-2

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Chicago, July 28.—We'd say the Nats are now reduced to one chance of finishing better than last. That's by playing smart baseball, because they can't hit and their pitching is pretty sad. Also, they don't field very well.

POVICH

Their dismal journey through the West has revealed all the Nats' weaknesses. Seven defeats in a row that started the day after they had terminated a four-game losing streak attest to the Nats' lack of skill.

The chief trouble is that Stan Spence is the only guy on the team who is hitting, with the exception of rookie Eddie Boland. The rest of the averages on the club read like the time of day between 2 and 2:30 p. m. George Case can't buy a hit. Myatt's hitting has faded to a tremulous whisper. Harlond Clift is a double-play threat, and Johnny Sullivan and Joe Kuhel don't awe any pitcher.

When they had better pitching and Gil Torres playing third base, the Nats were getting by as a first-division club. The pitching has bogged down dismally, and so has the defense. The Nats haven't made two double plays in a week.

Dutch Leonard and Johnny Niggeling have been pitching well enough to win for most any club except the feeble-hitting Nats. Leonard's last three defeats have been by scores of 2-1, 4-3 and 4-3. There are no excuses for the other hurlers, though. Early Winn, Milo Candini and Mickey Haefner have been pitching and ducking in the same motion.

The only gleam of hope for the Nats is Torres' return. He's due to join the club tomorrow in St. Louis. His play won't make them a pennant-threat or anything of the sort, but he'll give the club a lift. His value to the team was not quite appreciated until he left for his native Havana and the Nats turned the third base job over to Harlond Clift.

Clift's absence from baseball for a year did him no good. He's rusty both in the field and with the bat, and no longer is the power hitter of former years. Torres' third-basing was something superb compared to Clift's.

Ossie Bluege would be tempted to make a pitcher out of Torres, who won 19 games at Chattanooga last year, if he did not need the slender Cuban's hitting so badly. There was nothing very robust about Torres' blows, but they were timely and he had a commendable habit of hitting to right field behind the runner. As one Torres fan points out, "They've only won one game since he left the club 12 games ago."

There's a new appreciation, too, for the pay of Mike Guerra, who isn't coming back from Cuba. With Rick Ferrell showing signs of weariness from his constant catching, Guerra would have been a handy replacement with his hitting. As it is, the Nats' only other catcher is Al Evans, whose 18 months in the Navy didn't improve him as a ballplayer.

Bluege's situation is pretty desperate. At a time when he needed help, all he got was an outfielder from the New York City Department of Sanitation, and an infielder from the Bushwicks, New York semi-pro club. Bluege knows now that there's a war on, if he hadn't heard about it before.

Incidentally, Boland, the 31-year-old rookie outfielder from the New York Sanitation Dept., is now one of the more interesting figures on the club. The guy can hit, that's apparent. Under pressure, his fielding hasn't been very spectacular, but Bluege values Boland's hitting so much that he's trying to persuade Clark Griffith to give the fellow a contract that will make him stay in baseball. Boland is due to return to his city job at the end of August.

Bluege is also on the point of making a full-time outfielder out of Bill Lefebvre, his big left-handed pitcher. That's one of the Nats' troubles. The best hitters on the club, as a group, are the pitchers. And Dutch Leonard is the best bunter. It's a helluva note when that's the truth, because that means a lack of skill all down the line.

Butler 'Cap Booked Today At Jamaica

New York, July 28 (AP).—Two of the country's leading handicap horses renew their argument in the $50,000 Butler at Jamaica tomorrow with the threat that a 3-year-old may take down the major share of the rich purse.

The mile and three-sixteenths race, feature of the final day of Empire City's transplanted meeting, has attracted a field of 11 headed by Mrs. Payne Whitney's Four Freedoms and Mrs. Ed Mulrenan's First Fiddle, outstanding candidates for handicap division honors, and Mrs. Whitney's Stir Up, back in the 3-year-old title picture after winning the Empire City Stakes.

Four Freedoms will be out to atone for his recent fifth in the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs, which was won by First Fiddle after taking two beatings from Mrs. Whitney's 4-year-old, including one in the Brooklyn Handicap at Aqueduct. First Fiddle, a $2500 buy as a 2-year-old, has won $82,880, while Four Freedoms has earned $88,595.

Stir Up, only 3-year-old in the race in which Mrs. Mulrenan's fleet son of Royal Minstrel will carry top weight of 126 pounds, has shown a liking for the Jamaica racing strip with four of his five victories this year at that course. He'll pick up 116 pounds, one less than has been assigned to his stable mate.

Although the Whitney entry and the Fiddle figure to be close to co-choices, there are several hroses in the race that might well upset the apple cart. They include the fleet pair of Apache and Bossuet from William Woodward's Belair Stud; A. C. Ernst's Alquest, third in the Suburban Handicap; William Ziegler, jr.'s Wait A Bit, runner-up to Four Freedoms in the Brooklyn, and Alex Barth from the Millbrook stable.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

Home Front Diplomat

Whether or not there are any women eligible for the peace table, there are plenty who by the time this war is over can qualify for the diplomatic service. Take the average housewife:

If she has not given up entirely on the maid question, she must learn to adapt herself to a succession of kitchen potentates, cajoling and flattering them, handling them with gloves, catering to their moods, reading their thoughts, anticipating their demands and acting as buffer between them and her lubberly and self-assertive family.

She must be proficient in many languages so that she can be a pal —or at least on the best of terms— with the butcher, the grocer, the milkman, the laundryman, the trashman, the paper boy, the man who brings chickens from the country—everybody who renders her any service that makes the wheels in her house go around.

She must court the druggist, the florist, the beauty shop operator, the dry cleaner, the plumber, the electrician, the painter, the paper hanger, the tinner, the rug shampooer, in fact everyone in her neighborhood who's in the classified business directory.

She must be a more diligent builder of fences than a Congressman. She must keep her contacts with all the right people—those who repair typewriters, who tune pianos, who store furniture, who lay cement, who clean wall paper, who restore antiques, who doctor canaries, who make wigs, who do anything on earth that she or her family might at some time possibly need.

She must zealously cultivate all doctors, dentists, lawyers, teachers, preachers, osteopaths, chiropractors, chiropodists orthodontists, cosmetologists, etc.—just in case.

She must have a special friend, agent or underground connection in all pivotal spots, as the coat, suit and blouse departments of dry goods stores, the little exclusive dress "shoppeys," the book stores, the railway ticket offices, the apartment buildings, the hotels —every place there are more customers than goods.

She must be on the qui vive to call on all her new neighbors and to pursue a goodwill policy toward them on the chance that the men of the family may have something to sell or be amateur mechanics.

She must be sirenish enough to pursuade men to cut her yard, deliver her goods promptly, help her on the streetcars when she is laden with bundles, give her a lift in their automobiles when she is coming home from the chain store, lend a hand all along the way in these days of pioneer living.

When she goes shopping, she must be patient, even ingratiating, in her dealings with all persons behind counters, and at the same time be pleasantly firm enough not to be pushed aside by arrogant dowagers or aggressive debs.

In her home, she must carry on cheerfully at the table when her husband is moody because he is eating stuffed peppers instead of steak, when her children are demanding cake or pie instead of stewed prunes, and the dog is whining and jumping all over everyone because he isn't satisfied with his ersatz dog food.

She must adapt herself to a goldfish existence in her home as people constantly move in with her—a daughter or a sister with a baby (or babies) and an overseas husband; an in-law or friend who is engaged in warwork and who can't find a place to stay; relatives or intimates whose apartments or homes have been grabbed out from under them; flocks of acquaintances from the home town or elsewhere who can't get hotel accommodations.

She must constantly deal with people . . . people . . . people, and in doing so manifest a poise, a graciousness, a tact, an understanding, an agility of mind, an adroitness of speech that would make fencing with Churchill or Stalin or appeasing Hitler or Mussolini seem like child's play.

Two Year Old Waves Ask Chance to Sail the Seas

By Peggy Preston

The question vital to every woman who wears Navy blues is emphasized as members of the Women's Naval Reserve prepare for celebration of their second anniversary tomorrow. It is whether Congress, in the coming session, will give the signal that Waves are no longer landlocked.

Ranking naval officers, who will address the giant rally at 6:30 p. m. in Sylvan Theater, Monument Grounds, have already voiced their beliefs in the need for sending Waves to overseas posts.

The more than 10,000 women attending will listen for further assurance of their need abroad when they hear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, who will broadcast to them from Pearl Harbor. Admiral Nimitz has already pointed out that he has posts for 5000 Waves in his area.

Members of Congress have been invited to the rally and every officer and enlisted woman is hoping the gentlemen from the Hill will be duly influenced by the display and by the tributes which will be extended by top-ranking officers and officials.

Senator David I. Walsh, chairman, Senate Naval Affairs Committee, is currently in Massachusetts and will not be in attendance. His committee is expected to take action in the coming session on a bill to permit Waves to serve overseas.

Great Assemblage

The House committee has already approved this legislation with the amendment that service abroad will be on a voluntary basis with the exception of Pearl Harbor. Senator Walsh's office has made no formal statement on the question.

So Washington's Waves will have their fingers crossed tomorrow.

It will, in all probability, be the greateest assemblage of uniformed women in history. Capt. Mildred McAfee, Wave commander, will introduce speakers, including Admiral Ernest J. King, Admiral Nimitz and Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal. Lieut. Frances Rich, USNR, will be master of ceremonies at the affair, which is expected to attract several thousands of spectators from both naval and civilian ranks.

Martial music by the United States Navy Band will be a feature of the program, as will songs by the Wave Glee Club, led by Specialist Second Class Gloria Link. Lieut. Frances Rich will be master of ceremonies and Chaplain Robert D. Workman will conclude the program with a benediction.

Forrestal Sends Message

On the eve of the anniversary comes this tribute from Admiral King: "The male personnel of the United States Navy join in extending hearty congratulations to the members of the Women's Reserve; they are confident they will continue to meet the challenge with the high standards they have set for themselves until victroy is won."

Secretary Forrestal congratulated the service: "Your third year of service will be of increasing importance as our forces attack. Every man of the fleet is heartened by the knowledge that your willng efforts will support him in the battles ahead until our enemies are completely driven from the seas!"

If the present rate of enlistments continues, the Women's Reserve will reach its goal of nearly 100,000 women by December 31, 1944. The women who are adding this fighting strength to the Navy are now performing almost every type of duty which the shore establishment of the Navy needs. The largest single group of enlisted women are seamen, performing any of about 40 different types of jobs, varying from mechanical grease monkey posts to assignments in photo laboratories.

Eyes Require Relief From Tropical Heat and Glare

By Martha Ellyn

Few of us escape feeling like limp lettuce leaves these days of tropical temperatures. One thing that contributes to "that tired feeling" is burning eyes. Such a condition can come from strained and overworked eyes, also exposure to strong light and sun.

Martha Ellyn

You can't replace your eyes as you would a worn-out dress. Since it isn't possible to succeed in work unless we can see what we are about, it is up to us to give our eyes care. Too many of us neglect tired eyes. We refresh our bodies with baths, our faces with masks, astringents and cosmetics, our spirits with lovely fragrances, but weary eyes are not given a lift. The result is that we do not completely refresh our bodies.

It doesn't take but a few minutes to rest and refresh the eyes. First go to the cosmetic counters of local stores and find out about the valuable aids they offer. You'll find eye masks, lotion and creams. Then when you have these aids go home and give them a trial. You'll like their contributions.

The Carnival Touch

Lie back in a chair, chaise lounge or on the floor. Apply whatever refresher you select. There's available a cloth mask that looks for all the world like a carnival mask. This mask is saturated with a lotion especially prepared for the eyes. The treatment is, of course, primarily for the eyes. But the five minutes or so you relax while it is on your eyes will not only rest, cool and brighten your eyes, but rest your whole being. This particular aid costs but $1 a jar. Each of the 10 masks contained can be used several times.

You will also find an eye bath that will give quick relief to overworked, strained eyes. It is especially cleansing and soothing after exposure to strong light and sun. We have certainly had sun and light aplenty this summer. Just before retiring place the lotion in an eyecup and wash the eyes. You may also saturate pads of cotton with eye bath. Place the pads over the eyelids, lie down and take a 15-minute rest. From time to time, press pads gently so that the eye bath flows into the eyes. This is a restful cure for tired eyes.

The delicate, sensitive skin tissue around the eyes, where dryness permits crow's feet and squint lines to appear, need extra protection, too—especially in summer. A light bland eye cream to lubricate the delicate tissues around the eyes and help soothe away fine lines and keep the skin soft and smooth, is most helpful for this condition.

REFRESH TIRED EYES with a relaxation period. Ten minutes of rest when eyes are treated with pads saturated with a cooling astringent lotion will not only relieve the burning feeling but help soothe jangled nerves

Dog Restored to Blind Master By D. C. Man Who Bought It

A HAPPY PAIR—Richard Hutcheson, 16-year-old Alexandria, Va., blind youth, shown with Pensive, the Boxer puppy stolen from him early this week. The dog was returned by the person who bought it from the thief, realizing what had happened after reading about the loss in The Post

The five-day vigil of Richard (Dick) Hutcheson, 16-year-old blind newspaper carrier, ended with a celebration yesterday as he and Pensive, his Boxer puppy, were reunited in Alexandria through the generosity of a Washington man who bought the stolen dog for $20 from an unidentified man at Glen Echo amusement park and refused to accept repayment.

Howard Leon Hardt of 4627 12th st. ne. informed Dick's stepfather, Edward B. Holder, of 234 Evans ln., Alexandria, that he and his daughter, Carol Hardt, 12, had seen the puppy in the possession of a tall, slender, black-haired man at the park Sunday afternoon. Carol was attracted to the dog and the man agreed to sell it for $20, promising to bring its registry papers to them at their home the next day.

Fades From Scene

Hardt said they haven't seen the man since and it was not until they read newspaper accounts of Dick's loss on Thursday that they became suspicious about the ownership of their new pet. Late Thursday when Dick and his father arrived at the Hardt home to identify the puppy, there was no doubt on Pensive's part as he licked his master's face amid the excitement of going home.

Holder, who is employed in the ceramics division of the Bureau of Standards in northwest Washington, had purchased the dog on Saturday from Col. Arthur W. Kelley, 3500 S. Utah st., Fairlington, who had four other boxer puppies. He said Pensive was valued at $150 but because he was to be trained as a "seeing eye dog" for the blind carrier, the Holders could have him for $100.

Seen By Policeman

Officer Wesley Snoots of the Alexandria Police Department had seen the black-haired man with the puppy in Alexandria Sunday morning but did not know at that time that Pensive had been stolen. He said the stranger said he was from Washington, and after buying a hamburger for the dog, boarded a Washington-bound bus.

Holder plans to have Pensive bred later and the first puppy will go to Carol Hardt, he said.

Dick, who lived with his mother and stepfather at 3222 Wisconsin ave. nw., until last year when they bought their home in Alexandria, attended the Maryland School for the Blind for six years and has just completed his first year at the Virginia State School for the Deaf and the Blind at Staunton, Va.

He has been blind since he was 8 years old, when his eyes were affected by a constitutional poisoning, but with his handicap he has developed a retentive memory which makes his progress in school especially rapid. He is an accomplished pianist and plans to make music his career.

Condemnation Notices Issued In Alexandria

More than 100 property owners were to receive Government condemnation notices distributed by G. Stuart Hamm, the deputy United States marshal, beginning yesterday for land in five blocks of the downtown section of Alexandria which is being taken over by the Federal Public Housing Authority for a 166-unit Negro housing development.

At the Federal Court in Alexandria it was announced yesterday that an order vesting title to the land in the Government as of Monday, July 24, signed by Judge C. C. Wyche, was received from Richmond and filed yesterday.

Must Vacate by August 8

Immediate Government possession of all unoccupied property was granted with the provision that occupants of dwellings must vacate by Tuesday, August 8, the 15-day period granted by the court. The deputy marshal was not expected to complete distribution of notices to owners before next Tuesday and as many are landlords and do not live at the addresses, a delay in getting orders to occupants was anticipated.

The condemnation in two sections on opposite sides of Washington st., the main thoroughfare through the downtown area, includes the following five blocks:

Three blocks in Section A bounded by, Oronoco, Royal, Princess and Pitt sts.; Pendleton, Royal, Oronoco and Pitt sts.; Wythe, Fairfax, Pendleton and Royal sts.; and two blocks in Section B bounded by, Patrick, Montgomery, Henry and First sts.; Henry, Madison, Montgomery and Patrick sts.

Bids Exceed Funds

The Negro housing development will be in four, six and eight-unit sections built of brick and cinder block. A community hall is planned for the northeast corner of Royal and Pendleton sts. Bids in excess of the $716,000 available for the project have been received by the Alexandria Housing Authority as agent for the FPHA and the commissioners are now endeavoring to change the specifications or obtain additional funds to permit work to begin in the near future.

A total of $134,082 has been placed on deposit at the District Court for purchase of the land. Among the principal owners out of more than 100 and the amounts allotted for purchase of their property by the Government are:

J. Zarim, $17,435; Anna Ruben, $6950; Honora Nalls, $5750; Mrs. Martin D. Delaney, $5375; Ella and Walter S. The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

AFTER HANNEGAN, Hague, Kelly and Flynn got their telephone instructions direct from the President to put across Senator Truman, they found their job complicated by the fact that they had a letter from FDR indorsing not only Truman but also Justice Bill Douglas.

Finally, after a lot of inside debate, they decided to take the bull by the horns and make the letter public, even though it only halfway proved their point. The effect, however, was bad. Delegates accused Hannegan of holding out regarding Douglas. A half-truth, they said, was as good as a lie.

By this time, the grass roots revolt had got alarmingly out of the bosses' control.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, learning that FDR had turned thumbs down on him for V. P., decided to turn thumbs down on FDR for a fourth term. He started to withdraw his nominating speech. It was only the midnight intervention of Mayor Wilson Wyatt of Louisville which finally deterred him.

Meanwhile, Mayor Kelly's own Illinois delegation bolted his leadership and refuse to go for Truman. Secretary of the Interior Ickes, though a member of the President's Cabinet, led the revolt.

"The only thing I am interested in," Ickes told the Illinois delegation in secret caucus, "is the reelection of Franklin Roosevelt and the nomination of a second man on the ticket who will help him. Henry Wallace is the strongest man at this convention."

Kelly compromised by pledging his Illinois delegates for favorite son Senator Scott Lucas. Later that evening, it began to look as if Ickes was right. As the convention cleared its decks Thursday night of all business except nominating a man for Vice President, the Wallace supporters staged a tremendous demonstration. It lasted about 30 minutes.

Timely Adjournment

WALLACE LEADERS had expected that the convention would proceed that night with the Vice Presidential nomination. But as the crowds continued to root for Wallace, Bob Hannegan came over and whispered to Mayor Kelly. Then they both came over and whispered to convention chairman Sam Jackson.

"You've got to adjourn the convention," said Hannegan.

"This crowd's too hot," replied Chairman Jackson. "I can't."

"You're taking orders from me," retorted Hannegan, "and I'm taking orders from the President."

Jackson then banged the gavel, finally moved adjournment. The vote for and against adjournment was close, many believing that the "Noes" had it. Wallace floor-leader Senator Pepper of Florida started for the rostrum. Had he been quicker had he asked for a roll call, it might have been that the convention would have proceeded to the nomination of a Vice President. In that case, many observers agree that Wallace, not Truman, would have been the candidate.

Even as it was, Bosses Flynn, Hannegan, Hague and Kelly looked worried and half sick as they went home that night.

Immediately, they swung into action. That night, Postmaster General Frank Walker telephoned almost every chairman of every State delegation. How many postmasterships he promised, is his secret. That night, California's Bob Kenny, supposed to have been for Wallace but a great pal of National Committee Treasurer Ed Pauley, suddenly switched, began working for Truman.

That night, also, Kelly's ward leaders in Chicago did not get any block tickets to the convention, only single tickets. This was to prevent Wallace supporters from tearing off ticket stubs for several days and using them all on one day to stampede the convention. Also the next morning, Mayor Kelly's efficient police had orders to let no spectators into the top galleries of the stadium. Kelly was taking no chances. The top galleries remained bare.

Wallace Rolls Up Votes

NEXT MORNING, as the convention opened for its last session, the bosses got word that Senator Barkley had been conferring with Wallace; that Barkley, disgruntled at the way Roosevelt had treated him, was ready to throw his votes to Wallace on the third ballot if Wallace got over 400 votes on the first roll call.

This spurred the bosses to even greater activity. Ed Pauley began calling delegates down to his little office under the platform. Pauley is all wrapped up with Standard Oil of California, is high up in Democratic councils, can offer favors. Oscar Ewing, Democratic vice chairman and lobbyist for the Aluminum Corporation, also swung into action.

Despite all this, Wallace proceeded to roll up the impressive total of 429½ votes on the first ballot.

As his votes increased, White House assistants Jonathan Daniels and Jim Barnes stepped backstage to a hot-dog stand.

"This is hurting the boss," they told another Roosevelt adviser. "This puts him in the position of backing the wrong horse. If we could hold the convention over for a day and get to him on the phone, maybe we could swing him to Wallace."

"However, the party bosses now had things pretty well in hand. They were working feverishly to prevent a third ballot, at which time Barkley was scheduled to start a bandwagon rush, by throwing his votes to Wallace.

Switch to Truman Achieved

AS THE SECOND BALLOT was about to end, with several States passing, Wallace still had 474, with Truman 477½. Shortly before this, White House assistant Gene Casey of Maryland squeezed through the row of Maine delegates, seated just in front of Maryland. A former football star, Casey is no sylph, but he wormed his bulky frame past each delegate and, one by one, whispered in their ears.

Suddenly the Maine delegation, hitherto largely for Wallace, switched to Truman. Then Maryland, Casey's own delegation, announced for Truman. Casey originally was appointed to the White House through Henry Wallace, but now he was obeying orders. He did his job well.

One by one, other State delegations fell in line. The carefully planned bandwagon rush for Truman was on. Up on the rostrum, they turned off the floor microphones beside each State delegation, so no delegates could protest the switch-over or demand a roll call. Without microphones, their voices would have been drowned out in the din.

Behind the rostrum, Senator Truman, modest, sincerely not seeking the nomination, sat on a box eating a hot dog and drinking a bottle of pop. A voice came over the microphone: "Will the next Vice President of the United States please come to the microphone?"

Truman did not budge. Not until the voice had boomed several times, did he realize it was referring to him.

Back in the Wallace headquarters, his enthusiasts, dejected, almost in tears, filed by to shake his hand. Wallace was the only cheerful one present.

"We've all got to get busy now and work for November 7," he said. "We've got to elect the ticket."

Back at the bosses' headquarters in the Blackstone, some one remarked that it had been harder to defeat Wallace in 1944, when he was cheered, than it was to put him across in 1940, when he was booed.

"Roosevelt giveth, and Roosevelt taketh away," remarked another, as he packed up to return to Washington.

Pullman Welcomes Vets

Washington employes of the Pullman Company who are in the armed forces will be welcomed back to their jobs when discharged from the service, according to a Nation-wide Pullman plan announced yesterday by David A. Crawford, company president.

Veterans will have 60 days to return to their jobs, instead of the 40 days required by law. And they will be put to work within five days after making application, except in cases of physical disability, while all efforts will be made to find suitable work for the handicapped.
